

PROCTER & GAMBLE
EXECUTIVE TO KEYNOTE
2006 COMMENCEMENT
EXERCISES

R. Kerry Clark, vice chairman of the Board of Directors and a director of Procter & Gamble Company, will receive an honorary doctorate and serve as keynote speaker at St. Bonaventure University's 146th Commencement Exercises, slated for Sunday, May 14, in the Reilly Center Arena.

Giving people, especially children, around the globe the opportunity to "live, learn and thrive" is Clark's mission as overseer of P&G's Family Health business, which is one-third of P&G's worldwide business.

P&G, says Clark, has two signature projects: 1. making the world's water safe to drink because more than a billion people in the world lack access to clean drinking water, and 2. improving the life of children in developing countries through such projects as the Children's Safe Drinking Water program.

"If we focus on children now, we can change the future for generations of children," says Clark.

"Kerry Clark is a global citizen and business leader. He has an important message to share with graduates who will face an interconnected world and who must work and serve as world citizens," said St. Bonaventure University president Sr. Margaret Carney, O.S.F., S.T.D.

Also receiving an honorary degree during Commencement Exercises will be William L. Richter, one of the "The Anniversary Campaign for St. Bonaventure University" leading philanthropists, former trustee and successful businessman.

WOMEN'S STUDIES PROGRAM TO HOST 'THE YELLOW WALLPAPER' AT QUICK CENTER

At 7:30 p.m. on Monday, April 10, St. Bonaventure University's Women's Studies Program is offering an American classic for the community's entertainment in The Regina A. Quick Center for the Arts.

Michele LaRue will present Charlotte Perkins Gilman's "The Yellow Wallpaper," an important piece in American women's history. Admission is free, and the play is open to the public.

In 1885 Charlotte Perkins Gilman, a vibrant young woman and dedicated writer, was brought to her knees by marriage, a well-meaning husband and a questionable "cure." Relying on blind faith, instinct and courage, she willed herself back to health. Perhaps the most vital element to her recovery was the writing of her brilliant "The Yellow Wallpaper," published in 1892.

Turning autobiography to fiction, observed editor William Dean Howells, she penned a story "to freeze our young blood." "The Yellow Wallpaper" continues to chill today's readers, dazzling feminists and historians, mystery- and horror-story enthusiasts alike, with its wit, suspense and superlative style.

This production is fully staged and in period costume. It features recorded Victorian music and sound effects that enhance Gilman's remarkable story and moving prose. Developed for and touring under the auspices of The East Lynne Company, N.J., this production has played 60 performances, from New York City to the Midwest. Venues have included Washington, D.C.'s, National Portrait Gallery and Chicago's Newberry Library.

Michelle LaRue is an Illinois native based in New Jersey, where she often performs with the East Lynne Theater Company, uniquely specializing in American plays of the late 19th and early 20th centuries. This is her last engagement on a tour that took her to St. Louis, central Illinois and Chicago. At the end of April, she'll present Dorothy Canfield Fisher's "The Bedquilt" at the international conference of the American Quilter's Society, and in June, "The Yellow Wallpaper" for the 2006 conference of the Charlotte Perkins Gilman Society.

In recent New York City seasons, LaRue has been invited to premiere "Places, Please, Act One" at the prestigious New Dramatists, and selected to play "The Yellow Wallpaper" at the Double Helix Theater Company's annual One Festival. Among LaRue's favorite New York roles are Dinah, the bitter indentured servant in "A New England Legend," adapted from Nathaniel Hawthorne's "The Scarlet Letter"; Agatha, in "Key West," a new comedy by Jennifer Camp; and Katherine, in Robert Anderson's poignant "Silent Night, Lonely Night."

She is a member of New Jersey Repertory Company, which specializes in developing and producing new scripts and is a longtime member of the three major actors' unions: Actors' Equity Association, Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Acts (AFTRA). As a theater editor and writer, she belongs to Drama Desk, an organization of New York drama critics.
