

cinnati was detailed to go up the Alabama river to Selma. After the peace had come, he received his well-earned discharge from the Port mouth, Sept. 9, 1865, at the Brooklyn Navy Yards. His record is one of which to be proud and worthy of preservation. May 3, 1870, at the bride's home in Ischua, N. Y., he was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Viola Kaub. Mrs. Gile is a daughter of Jeremy and Lavina Lennr Kaub, and was born Sept. 25, 1851, at Ischua. Six children now complete this home, Edith (Adams), Catherine, Fred M., Thennin, Vincent, and Roscoe M. Mr. Gile's cousins, John and Andrew Geldin and Almon Gile, were in the service, the latter in 154th N. Y. V. I. and died in Andersonville. Mrs. Gile's seven uncles were in the service; Jacob Lennr died in the war, Thomas, John and Morris Lennr, and Lewis and Dolphus Kaub. Comrade Gile has fully filled the office of school trustee, and Dolphus Kaub. Comrade Gile has the husband and wife are members of the M. E. church, in which he has held the stewardship and is now clerk of board of trustees. Mr. Gile is a warm hearted, Christian gentleman. Surrounded by his large family, he lives on a well-kept farm near Hinsdale, N. Y.

DR. HENRIET S. GOULD.

Son of David O. and Caroline Dewey Gould, was born July 23, 1828, at Amherst, Erie Co., N. Y. He early chose the profession of medicine and became an able physician in Port Allegany, Pa. On the outbreak of the Rebellion he was appointed examining surgeon for McKean and Potter counties, Pa. Feeling that his supreme duty was in the field, to share the hardships of war with his fellow patriots, he enlisted Dec. 7, 1861, at Port Allegany, in Co. B, 114th Pa. V. I. Leaving his little family, for he had been married on the last day of 1857, at Ischua, N. Y., to Charlotte Wilson, daughter of Kniffen and Hanna Fitch Wilson, who was born June 25, 1834, he at once went to the front. Before any actual hostilities began he was commissioned 2nd Lieut. of Co. E, 77th Pa. V. I. and was therefore discharged from his first enlistment Jan. 14, 1862, at Harrisburg, by reason of an office April 15, 1862. He accepted the commission and entered his struggles: Yorktown, Williamsburg, Seven Days' Retreat from Richmond under McClellan, Bristoe Station, Fredericksburg. In winter of 1862, while at Ralmonth, he was granted a sick leave of absence, came home and being unfit for further service, he was compelled to resign, Feb., 1863, but was immediately appointed examining surgeon Feb. 7, 1863, and he performed his duties faithfully until the close of the war. His severe service had told on him, his untiring energy and high sense of duty always impelled him, so that no task was too great for the help of his suffering comrades. Weakened by hardship, worn with care, wasted by disease contracted in the army, he sank, and on Aug. 26, 1863, at Ischua, N. Y., he passed away. He left a wife and three children, Aquilla A., Jesse D., and Jennie V. To win a laurel wreath to the memory of one whose deeds of usefulness made him valuable is to but do him the justice which he meted out to others. In his death the Republic lost a faithful and devoted patriot—the medical profession, an able, zealous and unusually successful practitioner—the 77th Pa. V. I., for whose advancement he had worked assiduously; no braver leader, no greater ornament; to his wife, a faithful husband; to his children, an affectionate father; and his many personal friends, one whose memory they ever cherish as a true type of true and noble-minded gentleman. His chosen help-mate is an excellent lady; she lives in a pleasant home in Franklinville, N. Y.

GEORGE E. GRAVES.

Constant and Unice Phurber Graves were living at Cooperstown, N. Y. when a son came to brighten their home, George E. He was born Aug. 31, 1823. He came to this county in 1858, and was employed as a tailor when the war began. Dropping his needle and shears, he enlisted in June, 1862, as a private in Co. D, 154th N. Y. V. I., 2d Brig., 2d Div., 11th A. C. He bore an active part in the following battles: Chancellorsville, was with Dr. Van Aernam, at Gettysburg; garrison duty at Alexandria, Chattanooga, Bridgeport, Lookout Mt., Mission Ridge, Kenesaw Mt., Rocky Face, Ridge, March to the Sea, and the campaign in the Carolinas. Detailed on the march between Chattanooga and Atlanta as commander of pioneer men for hospital service, served as bugler at different times for about three months in the early part of his service, and as clerk to the regimental surgeon, Dr. Van Aernam, until discharged in June, 1865, at Bladensburg, Md. Comrade Graves was first married to Helen Jones. His second marriage was solemnized July, 1865, at Franklinville, N. Y., to Celia Smith, daughter of Jesse and Cynthia C. Smith. One son, Morris L., came to comfort and bless their home. Comrade Graves, although an old gentleman, is still active and bright and takes great pleasure in relating the scenes of his early manhood, when he went forth to fight in a glorious cause. He is still employed as a tailor at his home in Franklinville, New York.
