self upon his country's altar in September, 1862. In the 154th Regiment he stands at the head of Co. F. Since that time he has been in the country's service. He has been in several battles, and received a wound in his right arm, which in a measure caused it to perish. He was privileged with a furlough from December until towards the middle of February, during which time he accompanied his beloved companion, and gave her what comfort and consolation he could in her last sickness. It became necessary for his return to his company, and he took the last look and gave the last farewell, and again turned his back upon all that was near and dear to answer the call of his Government, to enter again upon the vicissitudes and deprivations incidental to a soldier's life, while his heart was bleeding from the lacerations of a fearful foreboding that he never again would see the companion of his bosom this side of heaven. There was some consolation in the fact that he filled a high and responsible position in the 154th that could not be filled by his subordinate, which would prove apparent if we could have been within hearing distance and heard the very air echo and re-echo again with the loud hurrahs that went up from every member of his company with but one single exception, on the return of their beloved Captain. And we can but drop a tear in sympathy for his bereavement. Undoubtedly the heart of Capt. Griswold forms a nucleus around which there is a sadness and loneliness that he has ever been a stranger to until this last trial, this bereavement, the taking away of the tenderest half of himself and burying it in yonder graveyard. If this obituary should come to your notice, Capt. Griswold, we want to send with it our benediction, and that is, "God bless you." We can offer no better solace than to say that you have an important addition to your family in Heaven.

St. Johns left her son, Cassius, to mourn the loss of a mother, whose place can never, never be filled. As children we have appreciations of our mothers when deprived of them that we never had before. May her christian integrity in life, her kindly words, rebukes, and friendly admonitions, all tend to make such impressions upon the heart of this son as to lead him to follow the footsteps of a dear but departed mother.

Services were held in the Arkwright Christian Church, Test, March 11-16, "Arise ye and depart, for this is not your rest."

understand that the enrollment for the State is nearly complete. It is probable, therefore, that the draft will soon be ordered.

CAPT JOHN O. GATSWOLD—Capt John O. Gatswold, of the 154th Reg., who was wounded at the battle of Chancellorsville, and taken prisoner by the rebels, is at his home in Ankrighouse on a visit. He was wounded by the passage of a Minnie ball through the right arm above the elbow. The bone is not injured, and he is likely to recover the use of the limb. He was in the hands of the rebels about three weeks before he was exchanged. He was fortunate in the matter of exchange, as the boatload in which he came down was the last which the rebels have allowed to leave Richmond. His arm was becoming very bad under the neglect of the prison treatment, and he thinks he could not have survived imprisonment till the present time. Capt. G. thinks that a greater effect by the rebels in the Army of the Potomac than the defeats they have experienced is the Copperhead manifestations among the people of the North. He also confirms the impression that it is the hope kept alive by these manifestations which principally sustains the rebels in a constant and discouraging in its other aspects to their cause. The great burden of conversation with them, both offensive and defensive, appeared to be the approaching depletion of our army through the expiration of the terms of the various regiments, which they regarded as nearly equivalent to their dissolution. To the suggestion that a draft was to take place, they replied that our Government would not dare to draft in New York. Capt. G. is expected to be in New York in a few days.

A Noble Pioneer.

THE LATE CAPT. JOHN C. GRISWOLD.—We did not have full data for our notice of this excellent citizen and patriot in our last issue. We have since learned that he was the eleventh of twelve children, and was born Aug. 1, 1819. His father died when he was three years old. When he was twelve years old (in 1831) his mother brought him with four other sons and five daughters, from Sangerfield, Oneida county, to this county, and they settled in Arkwright near the spot where the Griswolds have lived ever since, over 60 years. He married Susan Briggs, sister of the late Geo. W. Briggs, in 1844, and they had two sons. One, DeWitt, died at the age of ten; the other, Cassius M., is a prominent citizen of Arkwright. He and his four children are all that remain of his father's descendants. His mother died in 1864, and Capt. Griswold in 1867 married Alice Hill who survives him.

Capt. Griswold was a remarkably quiet and peaceable man, and his whole influence in town was that of a peacemaker, but he was intensely patriotic, and when the struggle for the preservation of the Union became serious, as it did, in 1862, he helped raise what became Company F of the 154th N. Y. Volunteers, and was elected its Captain. This regiment saw severe service and in the battle of Chancellorsville, May 2d, 1863, Capt. Griswold had his arm shattered by a bullet and he was taken prisoner and transported to Libby prison in Richmond. After he was exchanged he came home, but soon returned to service though to visit the hospitals of the Potomac. He was twice member of Assembly, in 1873 and held the place of Government of the Union Pacific Railroad years under President Grant. Governor Cornell appointed him manager of the State Asylum at B. In 1882 he was elected member of on the Republican ticket from District. Feeling better this he and his wife were about to trip to the White Mountains, indiscreetly drove to Chautau back a spirited team which his strength that he was prostrated and never rallied.

This is a handsome offer of Editor DeWitt, but we have a man who offers to do better than this. We understand Mr. Dotterweil, who owns a magnificent residence on Central on the hill south of Crooked Hill, to give the acreage of the lot his residence a site for buildings. He would give site. with impaired health. He was hon-1864.

For over forty years Capt. Griswold was Justice of the Peace in Arkwright, for several terms he was Justice of Sessions, and for six terms represented the town on the Board of Supervisors. In every position he was the same kindly, conscientious and true man. His kindness to all who needed his assistance, his strict integrity and his devoted patriotism which led him to risk his life for his country, all these noble attributes are known as household words in all this region where he was so well known and highly respected. Surely such a record is to be esteemed rather than the accumulation of vast wealth. His best monument is the love and respect with which his memory will be cherished in the hearts of all his neighbors and friends.
