

JAMES H. LOCKIE.

Andrew and Betsey Johnson Lockie were living in the town of Machias when a son was born to them May 22, 1839. He was engaged as a blacksmith in Humphrey, N. Y. when the War of Rebellion began; he enlisted Oct. 21, 1861 at Cuba, N. Y. in Co. I, 6th N. Y. V. Cav., Ira Harris 2d Provincial. At Staten Island in Dec., 1861 he was accidentally struck on left side of head by a horse shoe thrown on the toe of his comrade Wilcox; he was 17 days unconscious, and was discharged Jan. 23, 1862 at York, Pa., but re-enlisted Aug. 28, 1862 at Humphrey in Co. G, 154th N. Y. V. I., 2d Div., 11th A. C. Because of his injury he was confined in hospital at Camp Scott and from there sent to York, Pa., where first discharged. While in 154th he was confined in Findlay Hospital, Washington, with fever and epileptic fits; was sent to Broad and Pine St., Philadelphia, then to corner 5th and Buttonwood, and lastly to corner of 6th and Race Sts., Philadelphia, where he was discharged Feb. 5, 1863. May 11, 1864 he again enlisted in Co. D, 169th N. Y. V. I. Among his many battles we name Cold Harbor, Explosion of the Mine, before Petersburg; while here he carried his major, J. B. Sloan, to the rear after his wounding, and when Capt. Wm. Bird was struck in the knee cap Com. Lockie helped him to the rear. "I once found a man by the name of Spour wounded in front of Petersburg, and cut the grape shot out of his back with my knife." He was discharged May 12, 1865. Sept. 14, 1867 at Olean, N. Y. he became the honored husband of Cynthia L. Waite, daughter of John H. and Betsey Dann Waite. Four children are the seals of this union, Herman J. b. Sept. 4, 1868, Bell C. b. June 7, 1870, May A. b. May, 1874, and Ernest b. Mar. 29, 1884. Grandfather Lockie and her grandfather Abijah Dann both served in the Revolution. He is a member of the Rust Post, 367, and lives in a pleasant home in W. Salamanca, New York. From Staten Island to York, Pa. on barge "Coxacca," was towed by "Thomas P. Way;" drifted onto a sandbar off Sandy Hook, and were found by the "Cinderalla," and towed to Elizabeth Port by the Cinderalla and "Red Jacket."

FREDERICK M. LITTLE

A son of William and Lourana (Manwaring) Little, was born Nov. 27, 1840 in Farmersville, N. Y. He was engaged in farming when the cruel War of the States began, and enlisted as a private May 13, 1861, at Machias, N. Y., in Co. I, 2d N. Y. Excelsior, or 71st N. Y. V. I., Sickles' Brig., Hooker's Div., 3d A. C. Before the end of his career he ranked as orderly sergeant. The long list of battles in which our comrade risked his life include some of the bloodiest of the war, Fair Oaks, Chickahominy Swamps, Seven Days Retreat, Malvern

Hill, Bristoe Station, 2d Bull Run, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Manassas Gap, Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor, on June 18 before Petersburg and Peach Orchard. In August, 1862, he was confined in the hospital at Alexandria, from thence to Washington, and finally to Philadelphia on account of rheumatism caused by his hard service. He was slightly wounded in the back by a piece of shell at Gettysburg, and at Chancellorsville the rebels came over the works and they were obliged to run; his hat blew off but it is needless to say he did not stop to get it or count the buttons on the pursuing rebel's coat. An oak tree stood by the trench at the battle of Spottsylvania C. H. which was about 18 inches through, this was completely cut down by the murderous fire from the rifle pits. Out of the 100 men who went to the front in his company only seven returned unharmed. July 31, 1864, at New York City, Comrade Little was given his honorable discharge. His service had told severely on him and it left him with the rheumatism, which of late years has rendered him entirely disabled. Feb. 12, 1866, at Tidouate, Pa., Frederick M. Little and Carrie B., the daughter of Samuel D. and Abbie (Claffand) Loomis, were united in marriage. Mrs. Little was born Sept. 17, 1840, at Warren, Vt. Two children were given to this union; Charles F., born Nov. 1, 1867, and Nellie M. (Drum), born Nov. 22, 1871. James N. Loomis, the wife's brother, was in the 29th O. V. I.; was wounded at Culpepper C. H., sent to Alexandria, discharged, came home and re-enlisted in Co. H, 2d O. V. H. A. Comrade Little has ably filled the office of road commissioner; he is one of those patient Christian gentlemen, bearing up under his load of suffering with fortitude and dignity; he lives with his family in a pleasant home in Machias, N. Y.

AUGUSTINE W. FERRIN

Was born in the town of Concord, N. Y., March 9, 1843. His father was Adua P. Ferrin, and his grandfather was Ebenezer Ferrin, a pioneer settler of that section, who emigrated with his family from New Hampshire in 1816, and settled upon and cleared a large farm three miles north of Springville, on the road to Buffalo. His maternal grandfather was William Sanders, who came from Connecticut. While the subject of this sketch was a child his parents removed to Yorkshire, Cattaraugus county, N. Y., where they resided until about 1850, when they returned to the homestead near Springville. The father died in 1854 with typhoid fever, leaving an invalid wife and four small children, Augustine being the eldest and only son. Upon the death of the husband and father the family left the farm, and in 1855 moved into the village of Springville. Young Ferrin's education was secured in a country district school, supplemented by a few terms in the Springville Academy. In 1856 he entered the printing office of
