ampus life is at the heart of your college experience.

This isn't just about classes, papers, and studying for that big exam. Those are important, but what goes on outside the classroom proves to be just as valuable to your education.

Everything you do teaches you something about yourself, your friends, and your world. You might get life lessons in romance, friendship, compassion, or fun. This year St. Bonaventure students learned these lessons from AIDS activist Sharon Lund, the Residence Life staff, the Goo-Goo Dolls, and most importantly, each other.

St. Bonaventure, nestled below Thomas Merton's legendary heart deep in the mountains, has a long tradition of being an institution of budding romance.

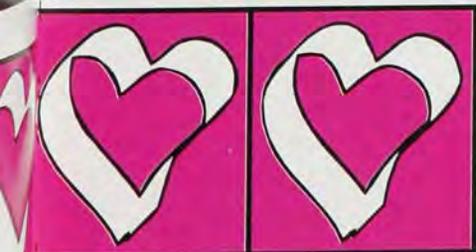

It is not uncommon for students to attend classes taught by a husband and wife duo, or to meet a potential spouse during theology class. Often St. Bonaventure students find themselves making eyes at that special someone from across the dining hall, or running to get more lima beans just because their crush wanted more French fries.

Many couples pass time at St. Bonaventure taking long walks or simply studying in the library together. You can sometimes catch two love birds spending time while doing laundry. It's very common to witness two starry eyed lovers holding hands while walking to Plassman, or waiting in line for a chicken finger sub at the R.C. Cafe.

Couples can choose to spend all their time together or to spend time apart. Hanging out with the girls on the floor or with the guys in the hall is also important at Bonaventure.

Not only does St. Bonaventure foster budding romances on campus, it is also home to many relationships that are conducted via telephone, e-mails, and letters. Freshman Amy Zaprowski said, "My boyfriend lives two hours away, it's hard sometimes but we make it work." They use the Internet frequently to keep in touch. Everything from chat rooms to animated greeting cards help long distance relationships.

Whether St. Bonaventure is the place you meet the person you spend the rest of your life with or not, you will always remember those special crushes and magical moments, the good times and the bad, the ups and downs, and most importantly, what's at the heart of it all: falling in love.

IT GETS PERSONAL WITH

Roommates

Roommates are at the heart of everyone's college experience. You either hate them or love them, place trust in them, or hide everything in your life whenever they're around. Many times, you couldn't choose who they were, but that usually didn't matter.

No matter what you expected college life to be, you could never really anticipate what your roommate would be like. Whether you knew them before you came here, met them at orientation, or the University simply thought you'd get along, your roommates were as mysterious and strange to you as you were to them. Sometimes any differences were worked out by the end of the first semester, and you lived the rest of the years as friends. Other times these differences never were resolved, you spent your days fighting with them to have your boyfriend or girlfriend stay over, or exactly which CDs belonged to which roomie. Maybe you even hung a sheet to separate your sides, or you didn't speak a kind word for months.

More often are the roommates who become the best of friends. You were able to share everything, including wardrobes, friends and fun.

Your roommates enhanced your college experience. If they were someone to cry to or share a joke with, or someone you always knew was there to fight with, each of them affected your life, and in some way, a small part of who you have become.

As you graduate, it will be up to you to keep in touch and keep each other up to date on your lives. They may not always be sharing a room or apartment with you, but they will always share experiences that remain in your heart. These people that helped shape your college years will soon graduate with you, and so your lives, which converged here at St. Bonaventure, will now take different paths. The changes that they brought to you are everlasting, and so you shall be forever intertwined.

Living, Learning & Loving

Famous AIDS speaker touches hearts and enlightens campus with her message of hope.

Sharon Lund is an everyday woman with extraordinary heart.

In addition to her role as mother, daughter, and friend, she has become an AIDS activist. Lund came to St. Bonaventure University to share her story with both students and faculty on December 1, 1998, as a part of the University's World AIDS Week.

In her lecture, which took place in the Regina A.

Quick Center for the Arts, Ms. Lund shared her hope that by telling her story she can help to educate other and prevent others from being infected by the AIDS virus.

Those who attended the lecture gained knowledge and understanding of the disease that has killed millions.

The work of AIDS educators and activists like Ms. Lund is beginning to have an affect, as the virus fell from the top ten causes of death for the first time in 1998.

Here at St. Bonaventure University students such as sophomore Paula Noga, who listened to Ms. Lund speak, felt that her lecture portrayed her story realistically, touching everyone who attended and making them aware of the changes in our world and in our community.

Sharon Lund is a woman of amazing courage strength, and perseverance, which are the forces at the heart of her message.

"My goal is to educate the public so this doesn't happen to anybody else."

Spring Weekend '99

Spring Weekend '99 could have been disappointing.

For the second year in a row, the headlining act hired to perform cancelled shortly before the scheduled show. Last year, comedian Norm MacDonald cancelled the day of his spring weekend performance, and this year the GooGoo Dolls had to cancel a few days before due to an illness in the band. The group, whose members are from Buffalo, had scheduled a concert at St. Bonaventure as part of their tour promoting the album "Dizzy Up the Girl," which features the huge hits, "Slide" and "Iris," from the soundtrack of the movie City of Angels. They had previously performed at St. Bonaventure during the 1996-1997 year, promoting their album entitled "A Boy Named Goo," which contained their hit song, "Name." The band has offered to perform at St. Bonaventure during the 1999-2000 school year, and hopefully scheduling conflicts will not keep that concert from occurring, as has happened several times in the past.

St. Bonaventure students made the most of their weekend celebration in spite of the cancellation. The weather was beautiful -- sunny and warm, which kept students outside almost all weekend. The annual softball tournament was a huge success, with many teams competing. Cookouts featuring bands and performers were held on the lawn in front of Hickey Dining Hall, as well as at several townhouses. The townhouses also hosted one of the most popular events of the weekend -- Mud Wrestling!

Other students simply took time to enjoy the outdoors, sunbathing on the Dev "beach", biking or rollerblading on the Allegany River Trail, or watching the softball games.

Spring Weekend at St. Bonaventure is always exciting, no matter what events happen, or don't happen.

Dancing

The Night Away

Hearts were beating on a crowded dance floor as DJ Paul Cramer cranked out the music for the annual St. Bonaventure University Fall Formal on November 8, 1998 at the Castle. The Robinson/Falconio/Doyle residence life staff planned the event, which was awarded program of the semester.

From freshman to senior, all were groovin' on the packed floor. "It was cool to see people from different classes and have a good time," said freshman Adam Whiting. Whiting may have thought it was cool, but most of the people gettin jiggy with it thought it was pretty hot. As the doors of the building opened, a cloud of steam rolled off the crowd. Whether swaying to the beat with your heart's desire or busting a move with your friends and floor-mates, everyone had a blast.

Sophomores Julie Thompson and Paula Noga help each other "put their faces on" before the big night.

The Reilly Row

St. Bonaventure University basketball fans are loud, crazy, and through it all, they continue to stand proud.

Everyone knows that St. Bonaventure fans are the some of the craziest in the United States. They always have been. Students, who make up most of the fans, nicknamed the “Reilly Rowdies,” look forward to coming to games with their friends and floormates. Not only are home games a welcome break from classes, papers, and presentations, but they are also a chance to show school spirit and pride, which is especially evident at televised games.

During the 1998-1999 season, Bona students continued to be as enthusiastic as ever, and not everyone liked it. At several games, non-student fans were angry at students, who would stand during the games. The non-students complained that they couldn’t see the game and yelled at student fans to sit down. Bona student fans being the “fanatics” that they are refused and told the protesters to stand up too, and “show some spirit,” sparking debates that lasted throughout the season.

Despite the controversy, Bona students continued their tradition of standing during basketball games. It means a lot more to them than just being able to see the game better. Students are standing proud: of their team, their school, and their traditions.

OUR Campus Runway

When it comes to fashion, the students at St. Bonaventure University don't miss a beat. Students dress to kill on a regular basis, except for the couple mornings that they have to make it to their 8:30's.

The popular shopping spots seem to be Abercrombie and Fitch, American Eagle, Old Navy, Express and Structure, just to name a few. On-line shopping and catalogue shopping are also another way students find to spend money. Some companies with online sites include J. Crew and Eddie Bauer.

Comfort seems to be what everyone is thinking about. Cargo pants and flannels are a popular choice for guys, while girls are especially into rayon, nylon, or lycra stretch pants, especially in black.

People are always looking for a way to express their personality and clothes are a perfect medium for this objective. Many people also say that the way you dress affects your personality that day; the better you dress the better you feel. Whether that is true or not is a matter of opinion, because the most important thing is that you let your true colors shine through.

HAIL TO THE CHIEF

University President Robert J. Wickenheiser remained a powerful and influential force on campus despite injuries that kept him off campus for much of the spring semester.

The 1998-1999 academic year began well for University President Robert J. Wickenheiser and the members of the Board of Trustees, evidenced by high enrollment in the class of 2002. The fall semester went quite smoothly, with a few bumps, which were to be expected. The spring semester was also off to a great start, with the exciting announcement of extensive renovations to Robinson, Falconio, and Devereux halls, along with the addition of the three new apartment buildings. There were also high hopes for the school's athletic teams. However, for our president things were about to take a turn.

In February, as he was leaving Hopkins Hall one cold afternoon, President Wickenheiser lost his footing on the icy pavement and fell, breaking his leg badly. It was announced soon after that he would not be returning to the University until his leg was healed, but would continue to fulfill his duties from his home.

It became apparent that the President's injuries were worse than previously thought, and the University community was informed that Mr. Wickenheiser would not return to campus for the rest of the school year.

He did come on campus for the annual meeting with the Board of Trustees, but his absence at graduation ceremonies was greatly noticed, by the graduates, their parents and other students in attendance.

Despite all of this, President Wickenheiser's influence on the campus was always noticeable, especially when students staged a protest during the knowledge and insight will continue the growth of St. Bonaventure University, both in and out of the classroom, with the beliefs and traditions of St. Francis and St. Bonaventure always at heart.

Learning from Afar

St. Bonaventure University promotes the expansion of knowledge into different countries and cultures through their summer study abroad programs. A major part of the study abroad program is the Francis E. Kelley Oxford Program. Through an arrangement between the two institutions, a group of qualified and motivated students travel to Oxford University, in England, to study under Oxford dons. From the halls of Somerville College, the students explore British culture and take two courses with a British perspective, such as Contemporary British Literature, Shakespeare, and Irish History. The intensive classes are unique because of their focus on Britain and include a field trip relevant to the course.

The six-week program leaves plenty of time for personal travel to places such as France, Holland, Scotland, Ireland, and Germany, as well as seeing the sights of England as a group. The 1998 group visited such places as London, the Lake District, Warwick Castle and Blenheim Palace, as well as gaining a comfortable familiarity with the streets, stores, pubs, and people of the city of Oxford. "After a while, I didn't feel like a tourist anymore. It just felt like home," said junior Sarah Ballard.

The students leave with a better knowledge of British culture, derived from their travels, teachers, and Oxford life, as well as memories that will last a lifetime.

Service With a Smile

Hickey Dining Hall's cheerful greeter, Colette Peterson, makes a great addition to the staff

No student leaves Bona's without knowing one very special person, Colette A. Peterson. She greets each student with a cheery hello or a good day as they enter the dining hall and she swipes their Bona Express cards. "Thank you my darlings," one hears as Colette's lips part and a smile peeks through.

Colette was born in Derry City, in Northern Ireland, the youngest of 15 children. As "a very pure Irish girl," Peterson was educated in Ireland by nuns. She met her husband, a resident of Allegany, N. Y. in Ireland during his stay in the military. She moved permanently to America in 1969 and was married at the St. Bonaventure chapel. After divorcing her husband, Peterson raised her two sons, Patrick and Philip, by herself. She graduated from Jamestown Community College, worked in the health care field and as social worker for 18 years. Peterson has also taken classes at St. Bonaventure.

Colette began working at the Hickey Dining Hall in the fall of 1997. Her favorite dining hall food is mashed potatoes and gravy. "That's the Irish in me," she said. Her favorite part of the job is the students. She enjoys the students she greets and the students who work in the dining hall. "I love them and wish them the very best," says Colette.

In Memory Of Bob Koop

The family of the Buffalo journalist donates money to build a broadcast journalism lab in his honor as a part of the Russell J. Jandoli School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

Bob Koop, a perfectionist like all journalists should be, did not tolerate mistakes because he believed that only the best deserved to be called journalist. This belief will be remembered in the broadcast lab dedicated to him on the St. Bonaventure campus, and the high-quality journalists who develop their skills in that lab will be his legacy.

The new Bob Koop television laboratory sits in the back of the Murphy Professional Building and opened in the fall of 1998 as a part of the Russell J. Jandoli School of Journalism and Mass Communication. The portrait of Koop, who was a respected Buffalo television newsman, hangs in the front hall of the lab and will always remind students and visitors of the devotion and hard work it takes to succeed in journalism.

The lab itself shines with the possibilities promised by state-of-the-art-equipment and enthusiastic students learning how to use the new technology hands-on. Senior Kelly Burns, a Journalism/Mass Communication major, said, "We have everything we need now, plus the first-hand experience

These students get first-hand knowledge of some equipment in the Koop Laboratory.

Students will learn how to operate all the equipment in the lab through courses in the Russell J. Jandoli School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

Students will act as reporters, anchors, directors, and camera operators, as well as numerous other jobs during broadcasts.

Work in the Koop Laboratory will be cooperative, with students learning to be better journalists and technicians together.

of using it that I wish we had when I was a freshman.”

The first and foremost mission of the Koop Lab is to be a learning instrument for J/MC majors, yet its doors will be open for all students to experience.

The bright glow of the cameras in the newsroom is seen through a window behind the scenes for onlookers. Producers, directors and anchors conduct the magic, just as they would in any other television studio.

Students and faculty are thrilled that the Koop family gave a $500,000 gift to start the lab. Despite the school’s relatively small size, the family saw something special here at St. Bonaventure, just as thousands of alumni and current students have seen. Although Bob Koop attended Syracuse University, he had worked with the dean of the School of Journalism and Mass Communication, Lee Coppola, at Channel 4 in Buffalo for many years. He was also widely known and respected throughout all of western New York and his family wanted to have him memorialized in the place that he loved and the place where he was most successful in his career.

The ovation around campus is the same. “Everybody loves it and thinks it’s great for the University,” said Mary Beth Garvin, one of the new lab assistants and a part-time professor.

Dean Coppola believes that this is the best thing to ever come to the University. “It shows that we can now compete with the bigger schools and still hold our own.”

The journalism program still stresses the basics of reporting, but now enhances that with a first class broadcast journalism program. “St. Bonaventure is the best little journalism school in the country. We offer a lot for what we have,” said Coppola.

A Teamwork
At the core of every athlete, every coach, every team, there is a heart that beats with dedication, determination, and a dream. That dream may appear different for everyone, but in reality is the same.

The spirit of that dream is success.

Scoring the winning goal, pitching the shutout, making the final jumper in over time, swimming the final lap; every sport has a different goal, but every athlete has the same one, to achieve their personal best and contribute to the success of the team as a whole.

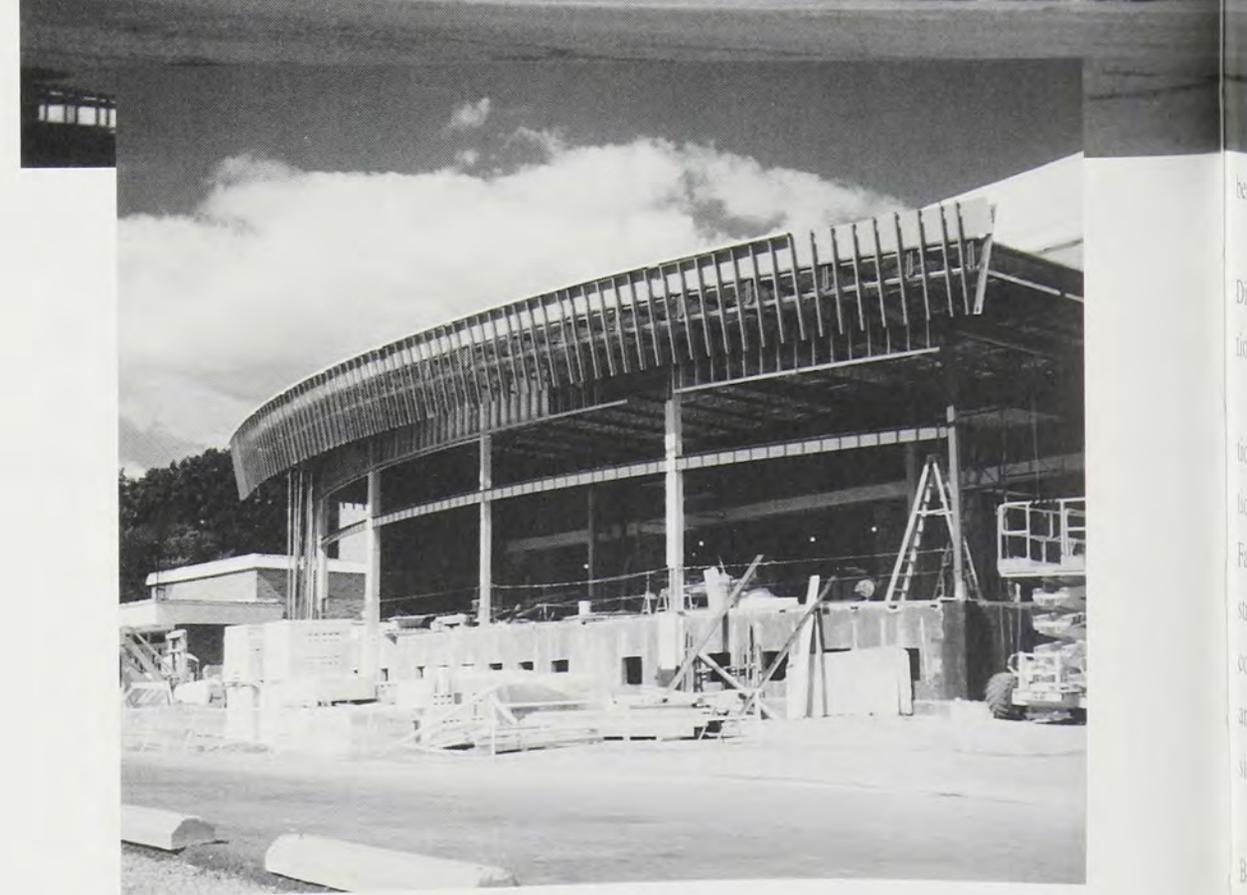

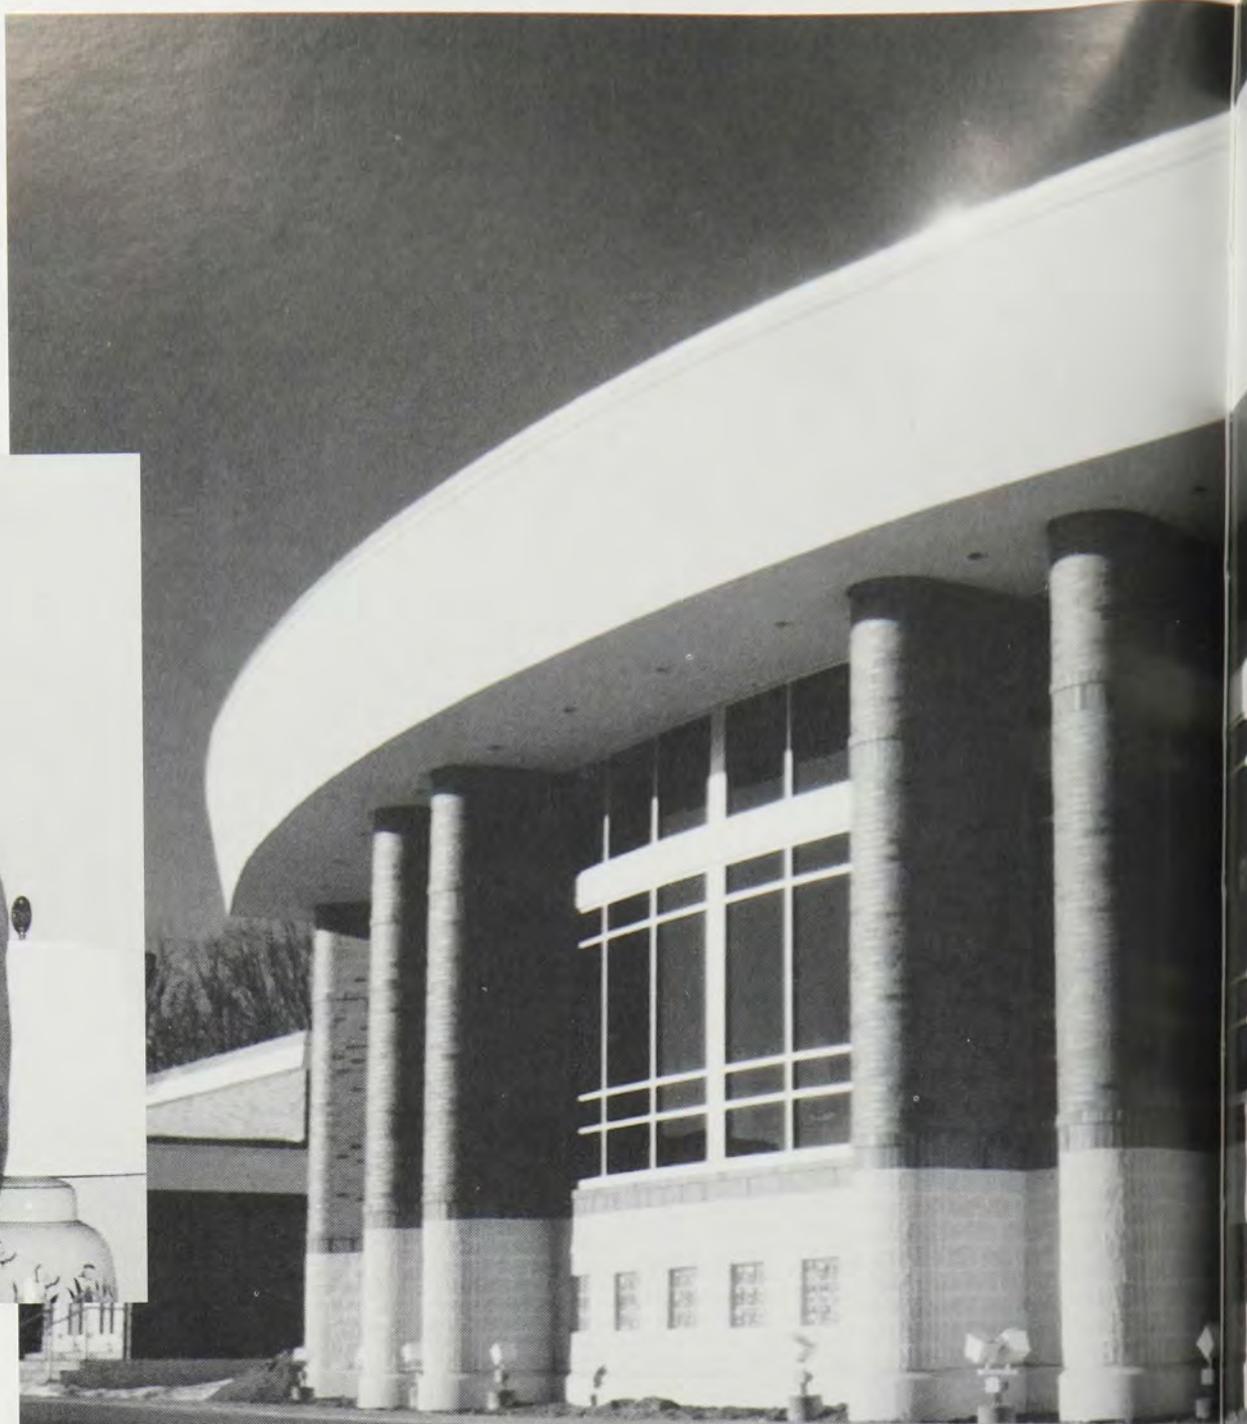

St. Bonaventure continues to uphold the tradition of excellence. Win or lose, the spirit of teamwork prevails in every effort.

Hall of Fame inaugurated

The St. Bonaventure University Hall of Fame has become the newest addition to the widely expanding Bonaventure community. The formal dedication took place on December 29 at the Reilly Center before the men's basketball game against Delaware State.

The Hall of Fame is located on the backside of campus. The theater like seating allows for spectators and guests to both view the plaques and trophies as well as the basketball court. The hall also includes a conference room, bar and large windows facing the outdoor playing fields behind the Reilly Center.

Dr. David Diles along with former Alumni Board members Kevin Ward and Rick Stevens were the masterminds who worked hard contributing their efforts to establish the hall. Previous Hall of Fame members came to partake in the dedication ceremony as well as to support the new athletes being honored.

It was built because the university and the athletic department felt a need to recognize the achievement of the Division I athletes and coaches from St. Bonaventure. Also the previous Hall of Fame was not drawing the kind of attention and sponsorship that the university was looking to achieve.

Realizing that athletics are a major attraction, most enrolled students and prospective students view this new addition as beneficial to the university. Outside corporate sponsors donated the funds that were needed to construct the addition. Alumni and other Bonaventure community members were asked to participate in selecting inductees to the Hall of Fame. There were three categories. One category was former student athletes who graduated at least 10 years ago, demonstrated outstanding achievements in athletics and an undergraduate bachelor's degree. The second category was former coaches and administrators, that have retired, died or departed from the athletic department at least five years previously and contributed to the athletic program. The third category was honorary members. Candidates from every sport are considered with no set quotas set for each sport.

The Hall of Fame is a welcome addition to the more modern renovations being done to the ever-expanding Bonaventure campus.

Volleyball takes a dig

women's lacrosse steps up to D-I status

Only a few weeks after head coach John Wasielewski announced his resignation members of the women's volleyball team received letters that the volleyball program was being removed from its status as a Division I sport to be replaced by women's lacrosse. Wasielewski stated his reason for resignation was personal.

The letter received by the team stated the athletic department had discussed the removal of the women's volleyball program due to the lack of monetary support. The lack of support is in part due to the fact that the team members did not initiate any fund raisers. Adding to the reasons for the dismissal of the program was the inability of the team to attract sponsors to gain recognition and funds.

The team was receiving money for 11 scholarships (partial and full), road trips, uniforms and practice gear.

In response to being informed of the university's decision, underclassmen Tracy Bryniarski and Caroline Keenan agreed that they should have been informed of this possibility prior to accepting the university's offer for admission.

Sophomore Sarah Myers and freshman Kimber Ayers transferred to play elsewhere because of the university's action.

The university is allowing any remaining players to maintain their scholarship for their duration at St. Bonaventure. Of the remaining six on scholarship, two are seniors and the other four have chosen to stay at the university.

"It's hard to transfer to a different school and play a sport," Bryniarski said.

"I like St. Bonaventure and will stay here on my scholarship," Keenan added.

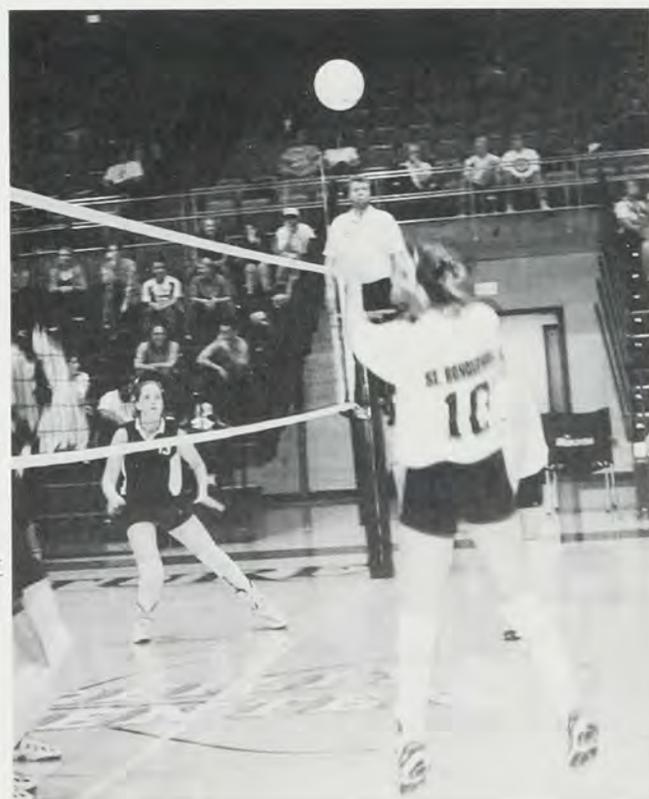

The NCAA rule book states that the number of teams at a university must be equal for men and women, therefore, women's volleyball was replaced by women's lacrosse.

The possession of the volleyball locker room, and money for equipment and uniforms will be transferred to the women's lacrosse team.

"This is a great opportunity to compete at a level that most of them would never have had the chance to compete at," said sophomore Catherine Mellon. "They are looking forward to the challenge," she added. Team captains Maria Ceravolo and Monica Parikh agreed with Mellon.

After a coach is named, the lacrosse team will begin training as Division I. The lacrosse team is scheduled to play its regular season in the spring of 1999 and next spring will compete against other Division I schools.

Getting involved in activities is important in order for a student to fully enjoy his or her college years.

At St. Bonaventure, there are plenty of ways to get involved. No matter what your interests might be, there are organizations to fit anyone's tastes.

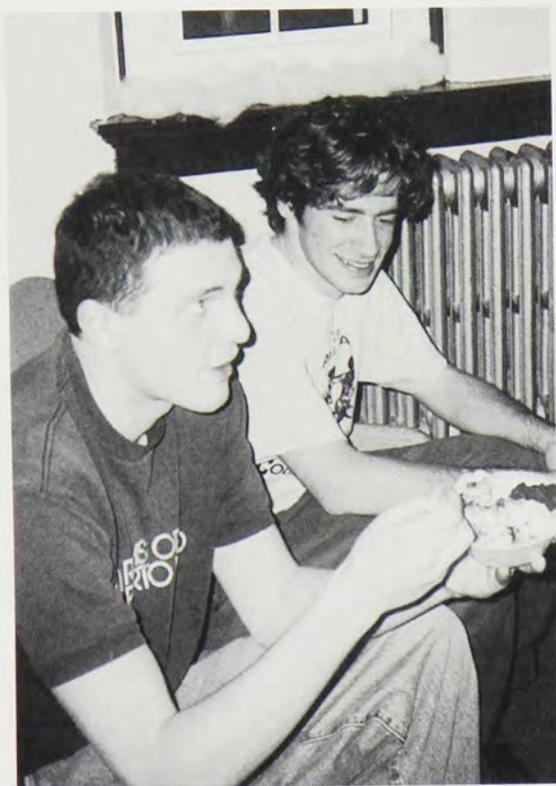

Some groups, such as the Laurel and Student Government have been around for years. New organizations have been added this year as well including College Bowl and the Sign Language Club.

Through these organizations, students learn invaluable skills such as leadership and communication while having fun at the same time.

Finance & Economics

Open to any student interested in finance, this year's Economics and Finance Club was run by president David Chatt and advisor Stephen Horan.

Members of the group make use of real life applications of finance concepts through an investment club. This year they brought several financial professionals to campus to address the club.

They also obtain contracts for internship and career opportunities. Their trips to New York City and Chicago provide them with many connections. To raise money for these trips, the group sold Bona mugs at the Organizational Fair held during Family Weekend.

Rounding out their busy year, the club also participated in the Christmas Festival of Trees which was sponsored by Student Government.

The future promises to be bright for the members of the club, both on and off-campus.

Pre-Law Society

The Pre-Law Society at St. Bonaventure is open to students of all majors, but is comprised mainly of social science, philosophy and pre-law majors. The group helps provide information to the community regarding law school.

The society held a fund raiser at Family Weekend in the fall. The money they earned was used to fund the trips the group took to other nearby universities to gain more information about law.

For many years, members of the Pre-Law Society have traveled to Cornell University for an annual law institution informational fair. Admissions counselors representing 50 law schools are in attendance at the event.

The Pre-Law Society is a great way for students to learn about law and learn leadership skills at the same time.

Be All You Can Be

St. Bonaventure's Reserve Officer Training Corps program offers students a chance to learn about the Army and receive college credit at the same time.

Three mornings a week, ROTC members participate in Physical Training exercises, affectionately known as "PT." PT drills range from hiking to the cemetery, to playing soccer, to PT tests. These sessions help keep the cadre in shape.

ROTC members also attend special camps and clinics at various times throughout the year to further enhance their military skills. Weekly lab sessions are also required for all contracted students in order to receive college credit. Participants not only learn military maneuvers, but also learn military skills and self-confidence.

Gold Bar Club

The Gold Bar Club is a branch of St. Bonaventure's ROTC program. The group raises money to sponsor events such as the Military Ball, Dining In, and Commissioning. All ROTC members participate in and benefit from the Gold Bar Club's activities.

This year's Gold Bar Club officers were: Christian Peck, Judith Kszystyniak Emerling, Anna Cutting, and Katie Ferrari.

Secretary Katie Ferrari claims that "The Gold Bar Club embodies the spirit of the cadets of the Seneca Battalion."

Black Student Union

Diversity would be the best word to describe the Black Student Union. Made up of people from all races, the BSU works to share African American Culture with the community.

The group adds spice to St. Bonaventure with its weekly meetings and annual programs.

This year, the BSU's main event was a pool party in the Reilly Center. They have many more activities planned for next year.

International Students

Formed in 1982, The International Students Association's main goal is to promote interaction between American and foreign students. They also promote multi-culturalism.

This year, the group sponsored an annual International Dinner in November, and an International Day in April where the group "World Color" performed.

This year's leader was senior Raul Ventura, who did a wonderful job.

Dance

In the last two years, St. Bonaventure has acquired two new dance teams, started and run by students.

The Legacy Dance Company was started in the fall of 1997 and is run this year by co-directors Kate Sixt and Rebecca Marra. They perform two shows each year for the Bonaventure community and offer dance classes in Butler Gymnasium. A future goal is to hold dance workshops for the community.

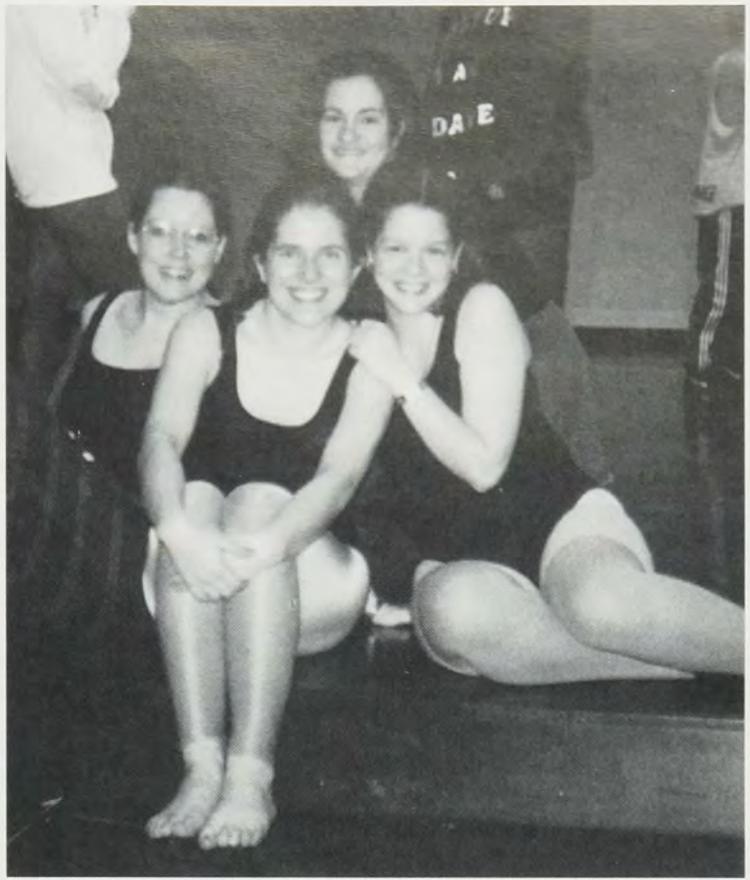

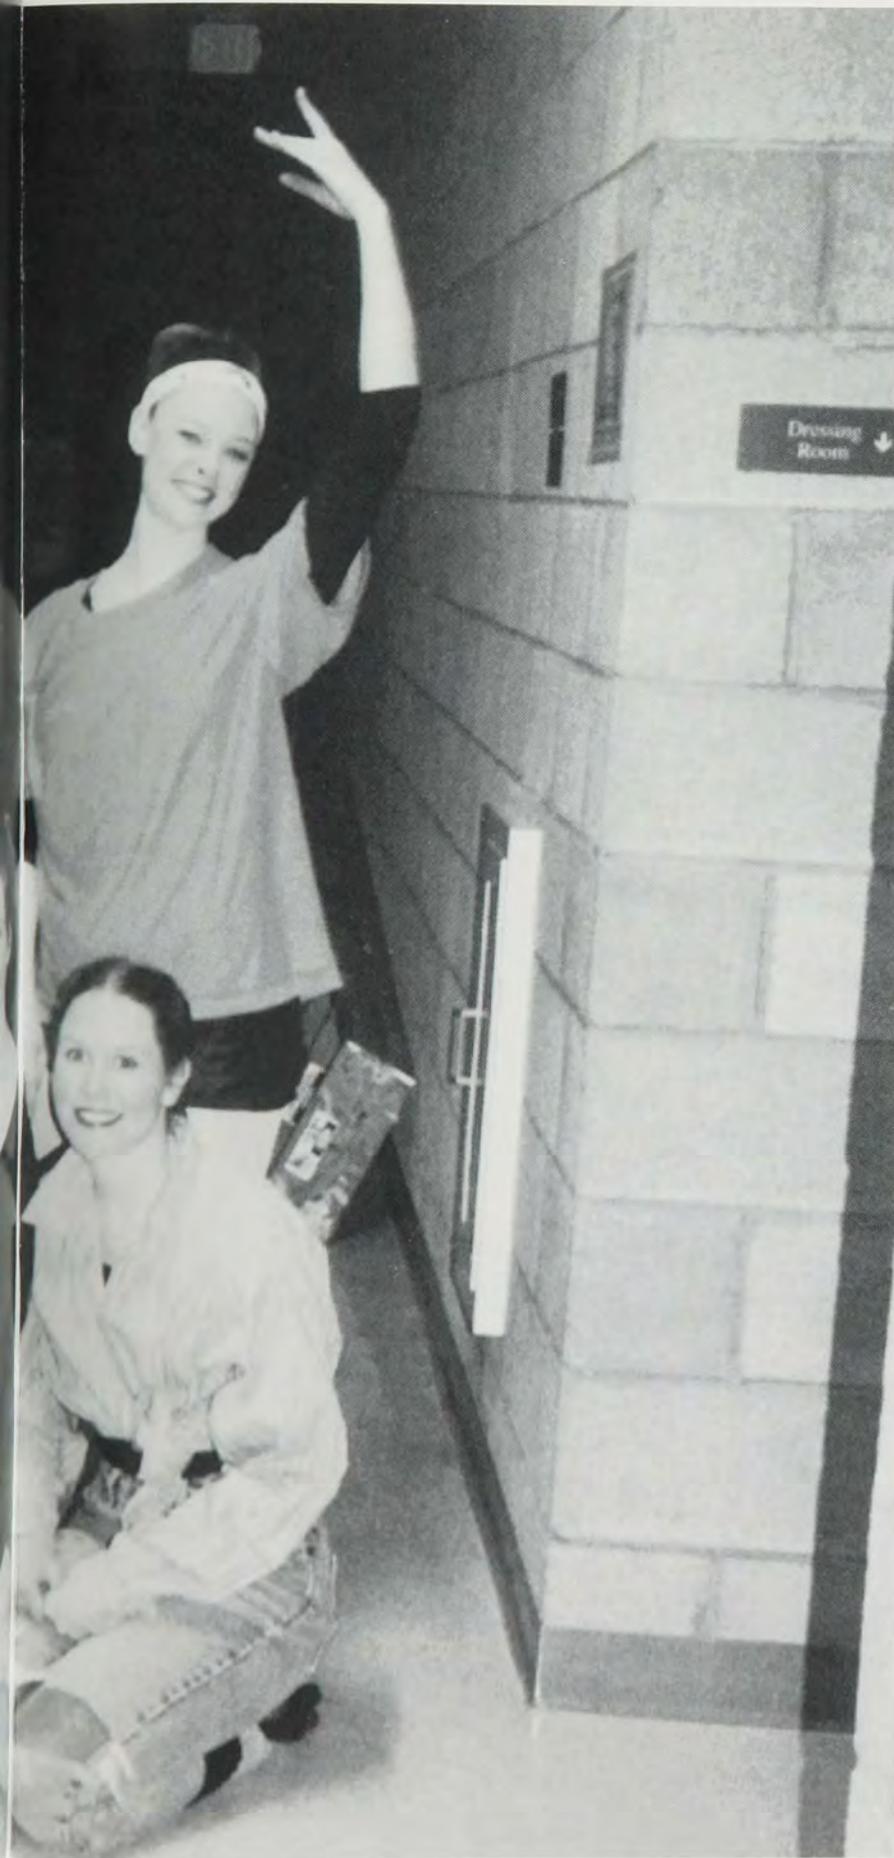

The St. Bonaventure University Dance Team is the second new group. This year it was run by Jamie Tankewitz, a sophomore, who also chartered the team. They perform at the girls' basketball home games wearing black leotards. The girls work hard to keep in shape and learn their moves. Their dedication has given them a great start and Tankewitz is optimistic about the coming season. She says, "Now that the girls know what to expect, we can work on making ourselves even better."

These two new groups have added diversity to the campus activities selection and these pioneers are to be commended for their leadership.

University Ministries

Programs that help St. Bonaventure students and the community

Every year, another wave of new students begins to make its way through the doors of the Thomas Merton Ministry Center. Most come with a simple need to meet new people. Many of this year's seniors, after first stepping into the center freshman year, continued to be active in the programs throughout all four years.

"I have seen men and women who are incredibly generous and have a real commitment to their faith," Sr. Kathy Dougherty, O.S.F., director of University Ministries, said of this year's senior class. Dougherty feels the class of 1999 has made a significant contribution to the state of the programs today.

These programs include the Warming House, the student-run soup kitchen in Olean; Bona Buddies; Search; Brush-up; and SBU for Life.

During the first week of her freshman year, Kelly Lysiak was feeling "homesick" when she first volunteered at the Warming House. "After going once, it became a regular routine. I started going all the time. It just feels like home," Lysiak said. She stayed very active at the Warming House, serving as a student coordinator and driver as well as participating in the Warming House Summer Internship Program twice. Lysiak, a sociology major, has also been involved in Bona Buddies and served as this year's president for SBU for Life.

"I hope what they have done here will carry over into whatever they do," said Dougherty.

Kirsten Herkert is planning on taking a year after graduation to volunteer at an inner city school in need of teachers. Herkert said she has gained a lot of things from University Ministries through her four years, including some of her best friends. In the process, she learned about herself. Through her four years, Herkert was involved at the Warming House, Brush-up, SBU for Life and Search, as well as spending a summer at Mt. Irenaeus through their summer internship program.

"I never limited myself to one program," Herkert said. "I've seen the whole realm of things available to us here (through University Ministries)."

"Our class has had some real groundbreakers who took on a lot of leadership roles," said Herkert.

She hopes that after she is gone other students will fill the leadership positions within the programs that members of her class have left behind. "There is a good group of underclassmen within the programs that have lots of opportunities to look at."

And more opportunities are on the horizon. This year the Friars Minor of Holy Name Province donated $500,000 to the Franciscan Center for Social Concern, an optional for-credit program that would incorporate issues of service and advocacy into a student's major courses. With such a program, future students will be able to experience even more of the benefits that University Ministries programs have to offer.

On the weekend of March 25-28th, St. Bonaventure's Warming House celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary. The Warming House is located on Second Street in Olean, N.Y. Run primarily by student volunteers, it began serving the needy families of the community in the spring of 1974.

The original idea for the Warming House developed out of an ambition to serve the elderly. Eventually, its goals expanded to serving full meals to all families in need. The program has grown to be extremely successful, currently serving an average of 600 people every month.

The Warming House has influenced many of its student volunteers. Christine Ryder, the current coordinator, originally started her experience with the program as a student at St. Bonaventure.

To celebrate its 25th year, the Warming House planned several exciting activities for the anniversary weekend. One of which was a twenty-four hour fast to help volunteers identify with the hungry. The actual anniversary was celebrated with a special prayer service on Sunday to recognize all of those who serve at the Warming House.

Brush-Up

Brush-Up, a program for under privileged children ages 5-12 helps them to improve their social skills.

They learn how to listen, respect others, follow rules and gain self respect.

This program also allows the children engage in activities that they do not usually get to do, which include roller skating, ice skating, bowling, arts and crafts, and many others as well. "I think it is a very worthwhile and effective program," said Rebecca Pollock, group member.

Under the direction of Tina Denena, the group meets every Sunday from 12:30 PM to 3:00 PM.

Any Bonaventure student interested in working with children is allowed to participate.

One of St. Bonaventure's newer organizations is SBU for Life. The group existed many years ago but eventually disbanded. The group reorganized in the spring of 1996 due to student interest.

At meetings, members discuss issues such as abortion, euthanasia, and the death penalty. Any one who is interested in life issues can be involved. This year's co-presidents were Kelly Lysiak and Sara Strenio. Fr. Peter Schneible was their advisor.

This year, one of the activities that the group participated in was a March for Life in Washington, D.C., on January 22nd. They demonstrated, showing their opposition to abortions.

Go Tell It On the Mountain

Rarely does a student leave St. Bonaventure without making at least one trip to Mt. Irenaeus. Seniors Laurie Washer, Kimberly Harrington, and Karla Williams on their way to take some time to relax at the mountain.

The cottage on the mountain: a perfect place to get in touch with God.

Mt. Irenaeus

Every year, Campus Ministries sponsors several trips to Mt. Irenaeus where students have a chance to relax, to study, and to talk with God. Students enjoy the peacefulness they find at the mountain.

Special trips are also made where groups gather to talk about important issues or pray for specific causes. "Care for the Mountain" overnights were held in the fall and again in the spring where students went to help keep the land on the mountain clean and groomed.

Other trips that were available included evenings away, overnights, Inter-Collegiate Weekends away, Bona Community evenings away, and prayer and rest overnights.

Certain organizations, such as SEARCH, Students for the Mountain, and the Bonavoyageurs hold many of their group meetings and activities on Mt. Irenaeus. which is an important part of the St. Bonaventure experience.

Model United Nations

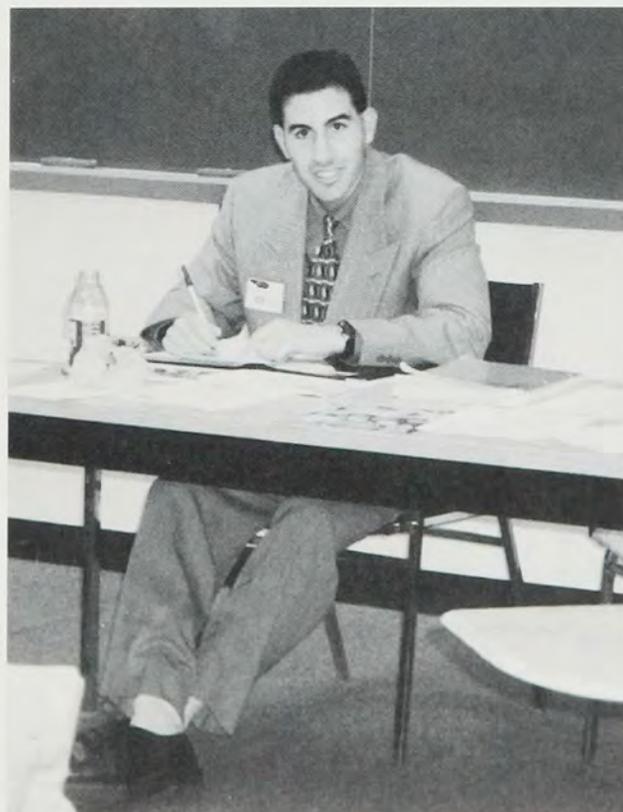

The Model United Nations group traveled to international conferences to interact and compete with schools from all over the world in debating and diplomacy. Delegates represented members of the United Nations, acting in the interest of assigned countries to better understand the intricacies of international diplomacy and world wide issues. In the process, they learned about the culture, economy and government of their country.

Model UN also hosted a high school conference here which welcomed high school students from throughout the area and let them act as delegates at larger conferences. In this way, St. Bonaventure students share their knowledge with others.

The group is open to all majors and all grade levels at St. Bonaventure.

College Democrats

Voter registration and educating the voters of the community are the goals of the College Democrats. This year, they attended a regional convention in New York City, and helped to campaign for two local Congressional candidates. Their president, Theologos A. Voudouris, spent time in an internship program at the White House. This was a monumental accomplishment.

Any student with a "belief in democratic ideals for a free society" is invited to join St. Bonaventure's College Democrats, according to Voudouris.

This year was one of the club's most active years in recent history and members are looking forward to next year.

Medical Emergency Response Team

Brian Quinn, Joe Kita, Tim Hite and Mike Guppenberger at the National Collegiate EMS Foundation Conference in Syracuse held in February.

The Medical

Emergency Response Team, commonly referred to as MERT, is a volunteer organization at St. Bonaventure. It includes over thirty members and is responsible for keeping the students on campus safe.

Every year, 24 hours a day, MERT is on call for any type of medical emergency. Members stay on call for 24 hour shifts, and are paged by security whenever any sort of an emergency is reported. The majority of MERT members are CFR's or EMT's and, therefore, are prepared for any type of malady.

This year, St. Bonaventure's MERT was honored with an invitation to the National Collegiate EMS Foundation Conference. Student EMS (Emergency Medical Services) organizations from schools as far away as Florida gathered together at Syracuse University to discuss strategies and training, as well as solutions to common problems found on college campuses. It was a weekend of learning and fellowship. Thanks to the conference, MERT is looking forward to successful improvements next year.

Mock Trial

This season proved to be successful for St. Bonaventure's Mock Trial team. The group placed 6th in regional competition where team members Darla Costanza, Jessica Hornbeck, Christopher Sheehan and Karla Williams each won All-Regional awards.

Their performance in regionals qualified the team to advance to National competition in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

The group was composed of Danielle Costanza, Mark Coven, Angela Furman, Jessica Hornbeck, Jason Parish, Karla Williams, and captain Christopher Sheehan. Dr. Steven R. Nuttall was the advisor.

Dr. Nuttall was very proud of his team, which won 3 out of the 4 rounds at the National competition.

“Fingers on your buzzers, ready, set, play bowl!” This year, St. Bonaventure reformed a College Bowl team. The school had one in the 1970’s and the early 1980’s but interest dwindled and the team broke up. This year, Dr. Lauren De La Vars and Dr. David Matz took the initiative to reform the club.

A tournament was held in Murphy Aud where student formed teams from St. Bonaventure played against each other.

The winning team went to a national competition. Although they did not place, they played well. One Member, Joe placed among the top 10 scorers. His teammates also ranked well among the competition.

College Bowl

American Advertising Federation

The American Advertising Federation explored many angles of advertising and public relations this year. AAF sponsored a resume writing workshop in the fall and sent delegates to the AUNY advertising conference in the winter.

At the heart of the AAF was the creation and presentation of an entire advertising and public relations campaign in New York City. The regional competition included schools from around the area such as Syracuse, Ithaca, Bloomsburg, and St. John's.

Under the leadership of Brother Basil, the six-member team assumed the name of Tasty Creations Advertising Agency and began working to construct a magnificent campaign. Every competing school at the conference was to create an exciting and innovative campaign for the Toyota Echo. St. Bonaventure was credited with presenting an amazing campaign.

The Bonadieu

The Bonadieu is the yearbook at St. Bonaventure University. It is completely staffed by students, with a faculty advisor.

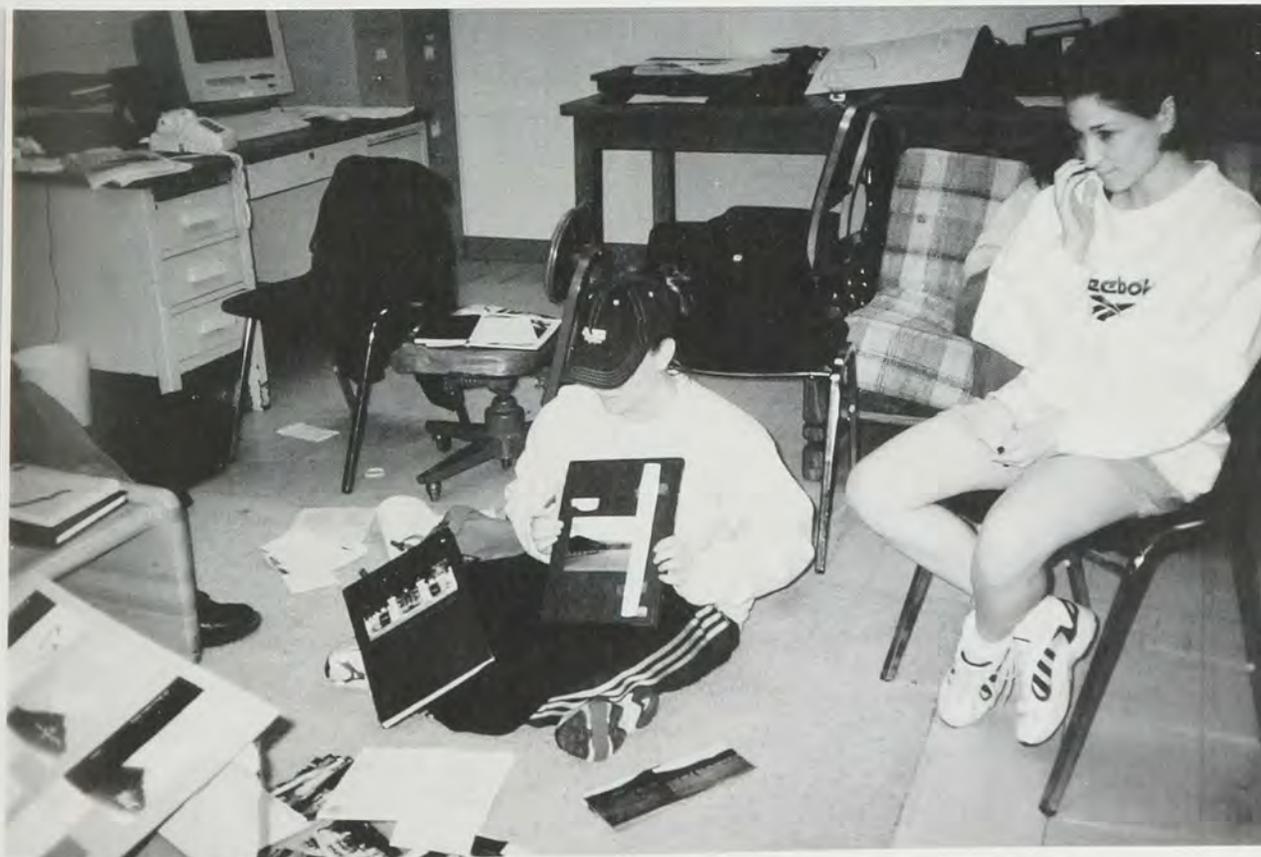

This year's editor is Carol Sadowsky, a junior Journalism/Mass Communication major.

The past years have been difficult for this organization, with low participation and outdated technology.

Things are looking better all the time for the Bonadieu staff: staff size has increased dramatically this year and new computers have been purchased that make work on each year's book much easier.

The 1999 book is the first Bonadieu to be published on time in several years and the editors and staff hope that their efforts will make the University proud of all their hard work.

The Bona Venture

This year The Bona Venture, St. Bonaventure University's weekly campus newspaper covered many events which took place on campus.

From concerts to construction, and renovations to protests, the BV was always there, making sure that students got the whole story.

The paper, which features the work of students in the Russell J. Jandoli School of Journalism and Mass Communication, as well as the work of other students with an interest in journalism, is one of the highest-rated college newspapers in the country.

The Buzz

At 8:15 p.m. on November 22, 1948, St. Bonaventure's radio station went on the air for the first time. It was originally called WSBC and it only broadcasted for 2 hours each day.

Now, 50 years later, the radio station is on the air live 24 hours a day. The name of the station has been changed to WOFM and now WSBU. Students can sign up to have a weekly radio show. "It gives kids a chance to expand. We're able to come here and experiment with things and get the freedom you can't get with commercial radio stations," says freshman DJ Chris Esposito.

Many mass communication majors find that an internship at WSBU provides them with good background for their future careers. Besides that, students find that a radio show gives them a chance to express themselves through their radio shows.

The Laurel

This year marked the 100th anniversary of St. Bonaventure's publication, The Laurel. The Laurel is the oldest college literary magazine in the nation.

The magazine is composed of photography, poetry and prose that is submitted by Bonaventure students. The staff then reviews the work and gives the artist feedback before they put the work into the magazine.

The class of 1999 was involved in many sports, organizations, and events this year.

Seniors participated in the organizations that helped to make the Bonaventure campus not just a place for learning, but also for living.

As the class of 1999 celebrates their graduation and leaves our campus, we remember them for all that they have done and for the tradition which they have helped to instill in the heart of the University: honor, respect, loyalty, and commitment. Their talents and efforts will continue to affect St. Bonaventure for years to come. May their journey be a good one, filled with happiness and joy, and may they never forget St. Bonaventure, where the good journey begins.

Counting Down the DAZE

The class of 1999 counted down the “Daze” to graduation, and the end of their Bonaventure journey, at different events throughout the year.

The first of these celebrations was for “199 Daze” and took place on Halloween in the Rathskeller.

The costume party brought out the creativity and imagination of the senior class. Groups of friends came to the event as the cast of “Gilligan’s Island” and Chippendale dancers. Other costumes included the “Call AT&T” guy and monsters and demons of all shapes and sizes.

After the exciting party, the seniors piled into the Bona Bus and rode into Allegany, where the fun continued. Senior Carol Brown remembers the ride back to campus on the bus. “Everyone was laughing and singing, just having a great time. I think we were singing “The Wheels on the Bus Go Round and Round.”

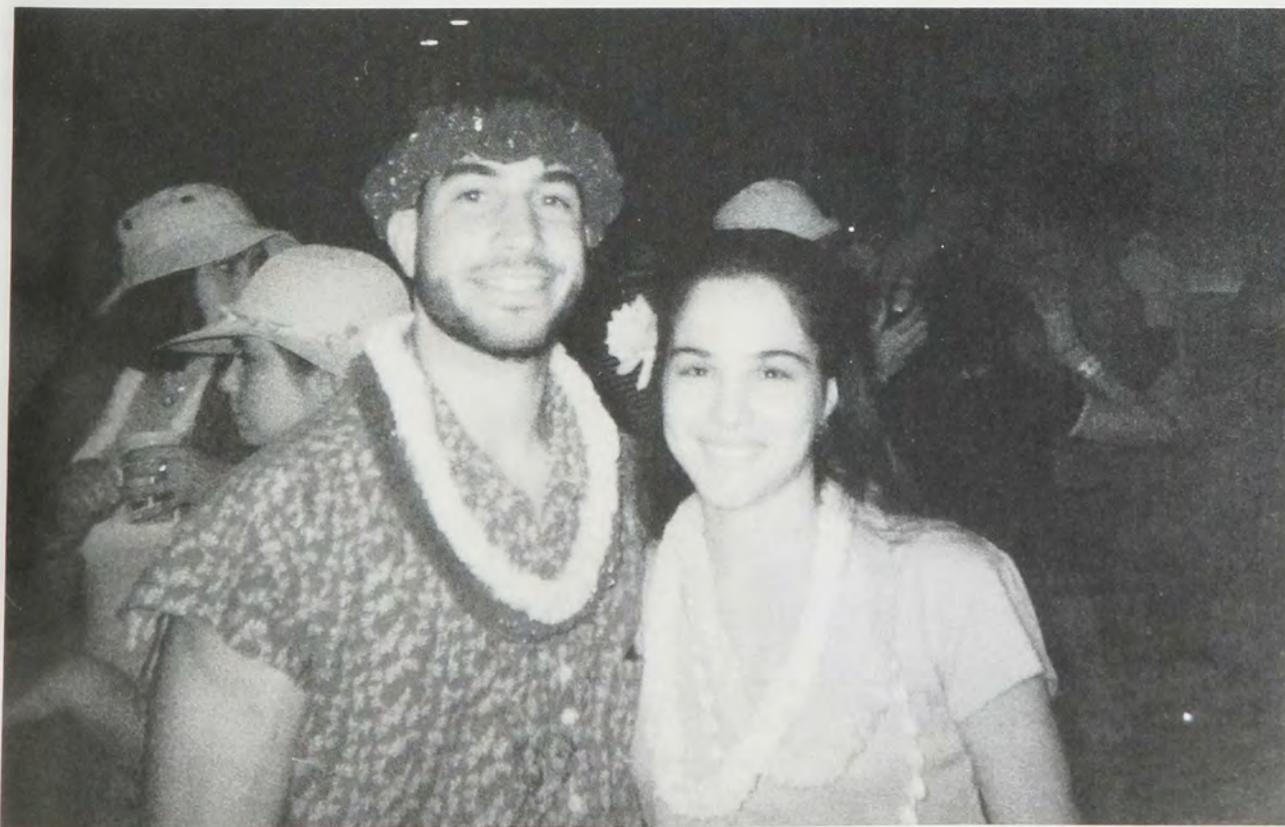

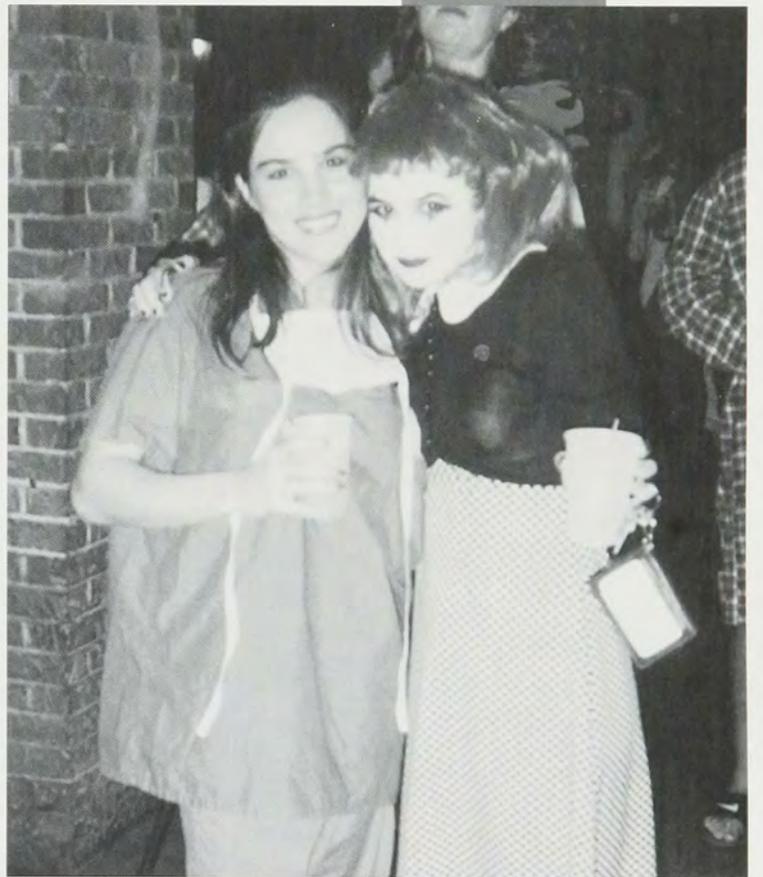

The setting for “99 Daze” was quite different. The event was held at the Old Library Restaurant, and included an all night buffet, an open bar, and the music of DJ Sam Turek. Senior Jim Echeverria said the class bonded with conversation. “It was just a chance to put everything aside and get together outside class, just have dinner and talk about life.”

Over 200 members of the class of '99 attended the party, said Tamara Paris, senior class president. “It was a major success; everything went smoothly.”

Students also enjoyed the chance to get to know classmates they hadn’t met or just those they hadn’t seen for awhile. “People talked with people they don’t normally talk to or know. I don’t think everyone had realized that we are graduating yet. That is what this night is about, to put away resumes and get together and get to share the moment with everyone,” said Jessica Barber.

Danielle Burt enjoyed the celebration, saying, “It was a lot different from prom, where you could bring a date from another class. This night was only for seniors.”

They Work Hard for the Money

It's a fact of college life: college is expensive. One of the ways that students can supplement their income is with an on-campus job.

Senior Rick Lagowski works in the Reilly Center Café as a cook. He prepares the chicken finger subs, pizza bagels, and quesadillas that his fellow students and many other people enjoy everyday.

Senior Angela DePinto, a biology major, holds two jobs in The Regina A. Quick Center for the Arts. DePinto is a gallery receptionist and a music librarian at the QAC. "As a receptionist, I pass out information on the galleries, greet visitors and answer any questions they might have. As a music librarian, I sort, number, and file music for the music ensembles. I also help out the professors when they need it, making copies and running errands for them. I really enjoy my jobs," she said.

Senior Peter Velez, a finance major, works in the Ticket Office. He helps out students and faculty every day, cashing payroll and personal checks and selling tickets to sporting events, such as basketball games, and special events, such as the Tragically Hip and Goo Goo Dolls concerts this year.

A variety of employment opportunities are available at St. Bonaventure University for students on campus. These jobs help students pay their bills and gain insight into the world around them.

The Real World

Seniors face the world after graduation

The class of 1999 is moving beyond St. Bonaventure. After they graduate, seniors will be applying what they have learned, both in and out of the classroom, in a variety of ways.

Senior Brian Moritz will be working here in Olean as a general assignment reporter at the Olean Times Herald newspaper. Moritz said that he is very excited to be graduating and he is looking forward to moving out of the classroom and into the real world.

Senior Ed Truty is also putting himself into the job market, and he hopes to have a position ensured before graduation. "Right now, I'm planning to move to Atlanta, Ga. I'm putting my resume in at a few places there and I have some leads. I'm excited to be moving somewhere warm. It's going to be great," he said. Truty is ready to move on to the next chapter of his life.

While Moritz and Truty are moving into the world of gainful employment, many seniors are choosing to continue their education at graduate schools. Senior Jessica Juliano will be attending the University of Buffalo, where she hopes to get an MBA in Accounting. Juliano says that she enjoys classes and isn't ready to give up the college lifestyle. Senior Rebecca Fleming also plans to attend graduate school. Fleming, who is graduating from St. Bonaventure with a degree in English, plans to get her doctorate and become an English professor at the college level.

No matter what happens after graduation, the senior class of 1999 will always keep St. Bonaventure close to their hearts. Wherever they go and whatever they do, the St. Bonaventure community wishes them a "Good Journey."

Father Richard Flaherty, senior class advisor, presided at the Baccalaureate Mass.

The gifts were presented by seniors in their graduation gowns.

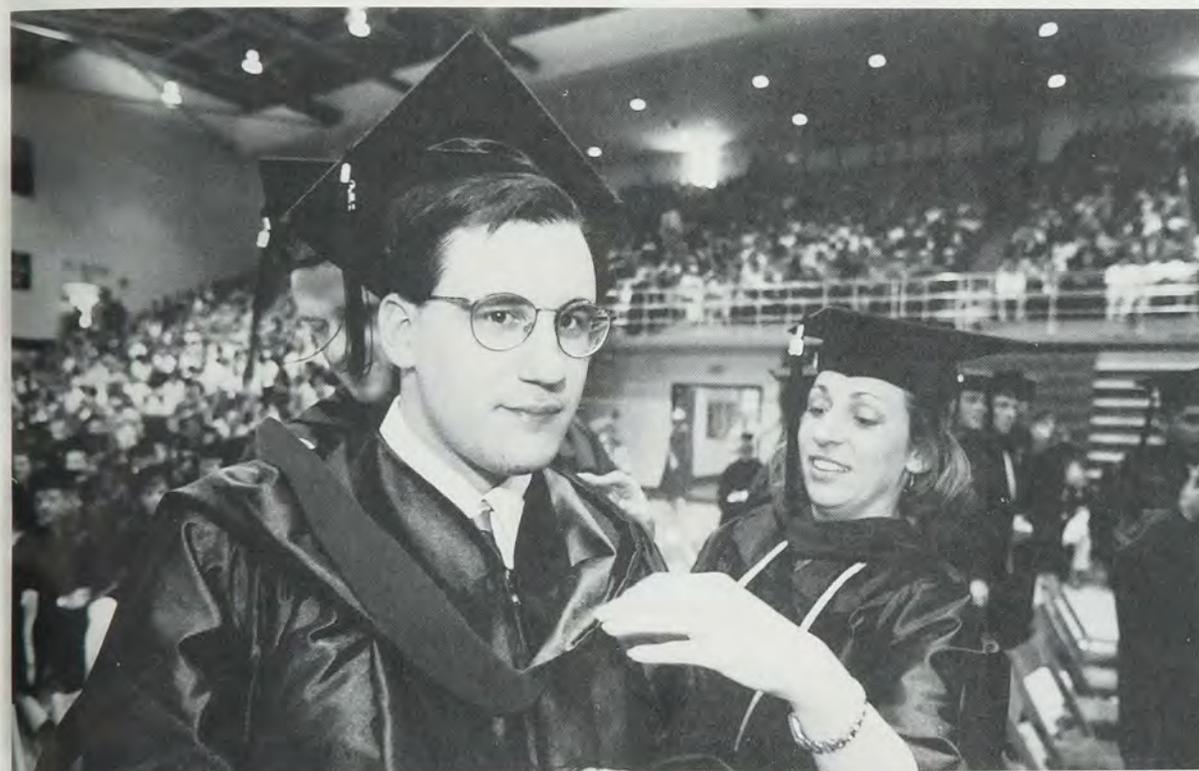

This senior sang the responsorial psalm.

The St. Bonaventure Music Ministry Choir provided music for the mass, and was led by junior Michael Templeton.

The 1999 Ideal Bonaventure Woman and Man: Karla Williams and Jim Echeverria.

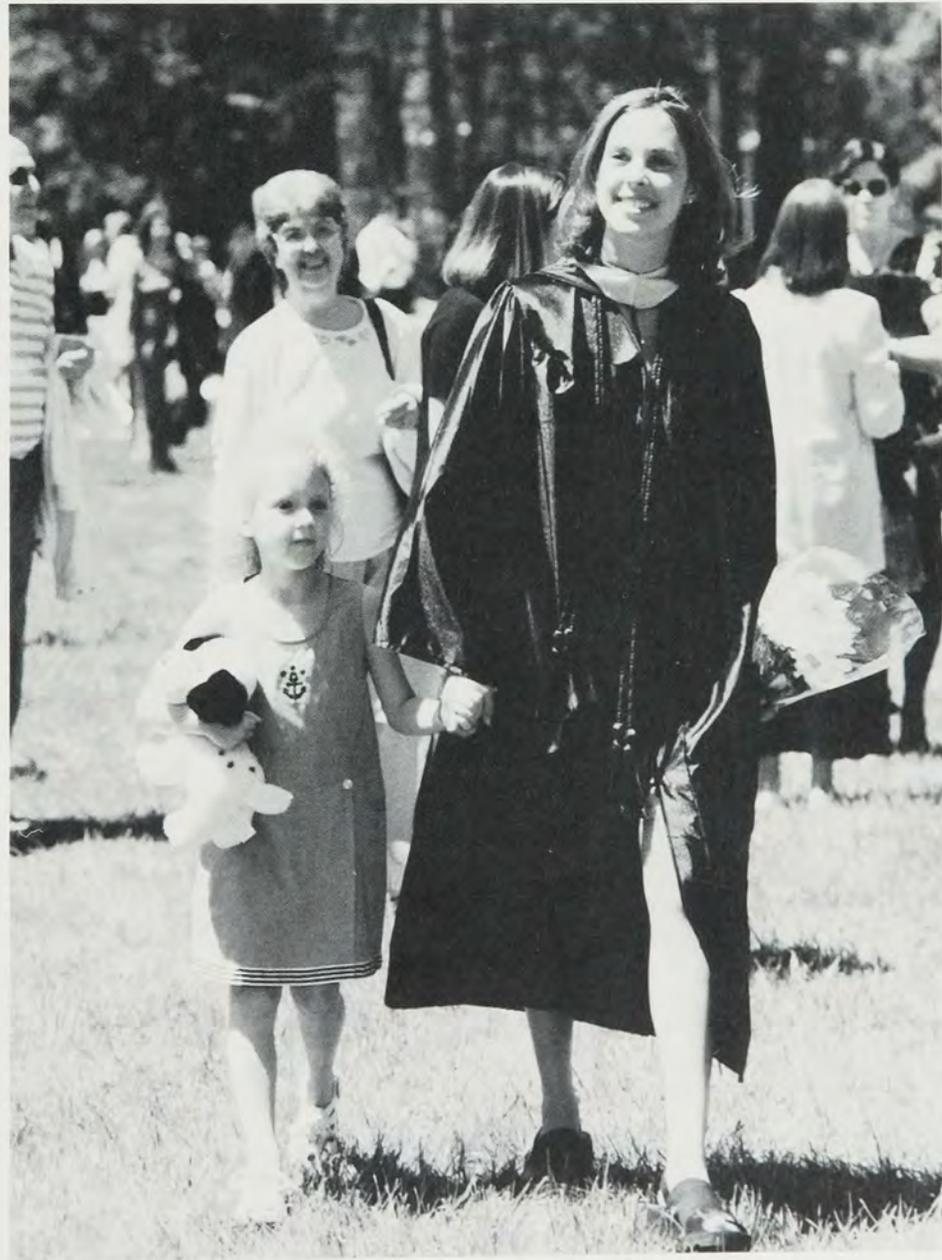

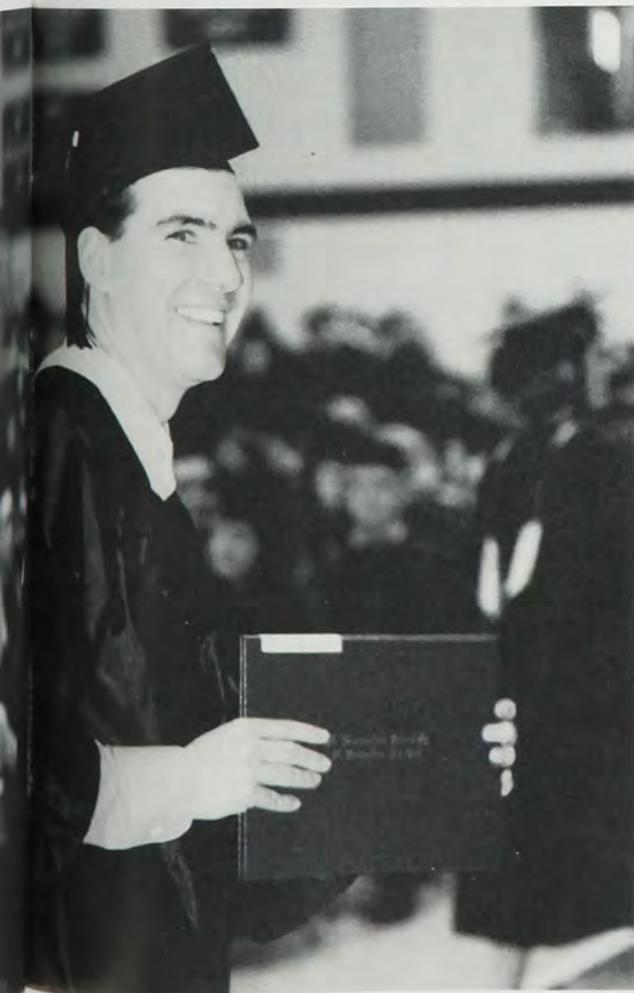

The class of 1999 at commencement, wait to receive their diplomas.

Graduation of the Class of 1999

The spirit of the Class of 1999 will always be at home here at St. Bonaventure University. It is pervasive and will continue to affect the future generations of Bonaventure students and graduates. They hold a place in the heart of the university community, and a piece of that community will go with them wherever their good journey takes them. May God bring them happiness, success, and a life filled with the spirit of St. Bonaventure.

Class of 1999

We wish you all the best in your future!

From the staff of the 1999
Bonadieu

Dear Friends,

The 1998-1999 academic year was an exciting and productive year for the staff of the Bonadieu.

Excitement came every week at our meetings as we gained many new members, taking our small group of three returning staffers and bringing in fresh, eager, new faces. Each week also brought the excitement of developing our theme, taking more pictures, and seeing pages finished.

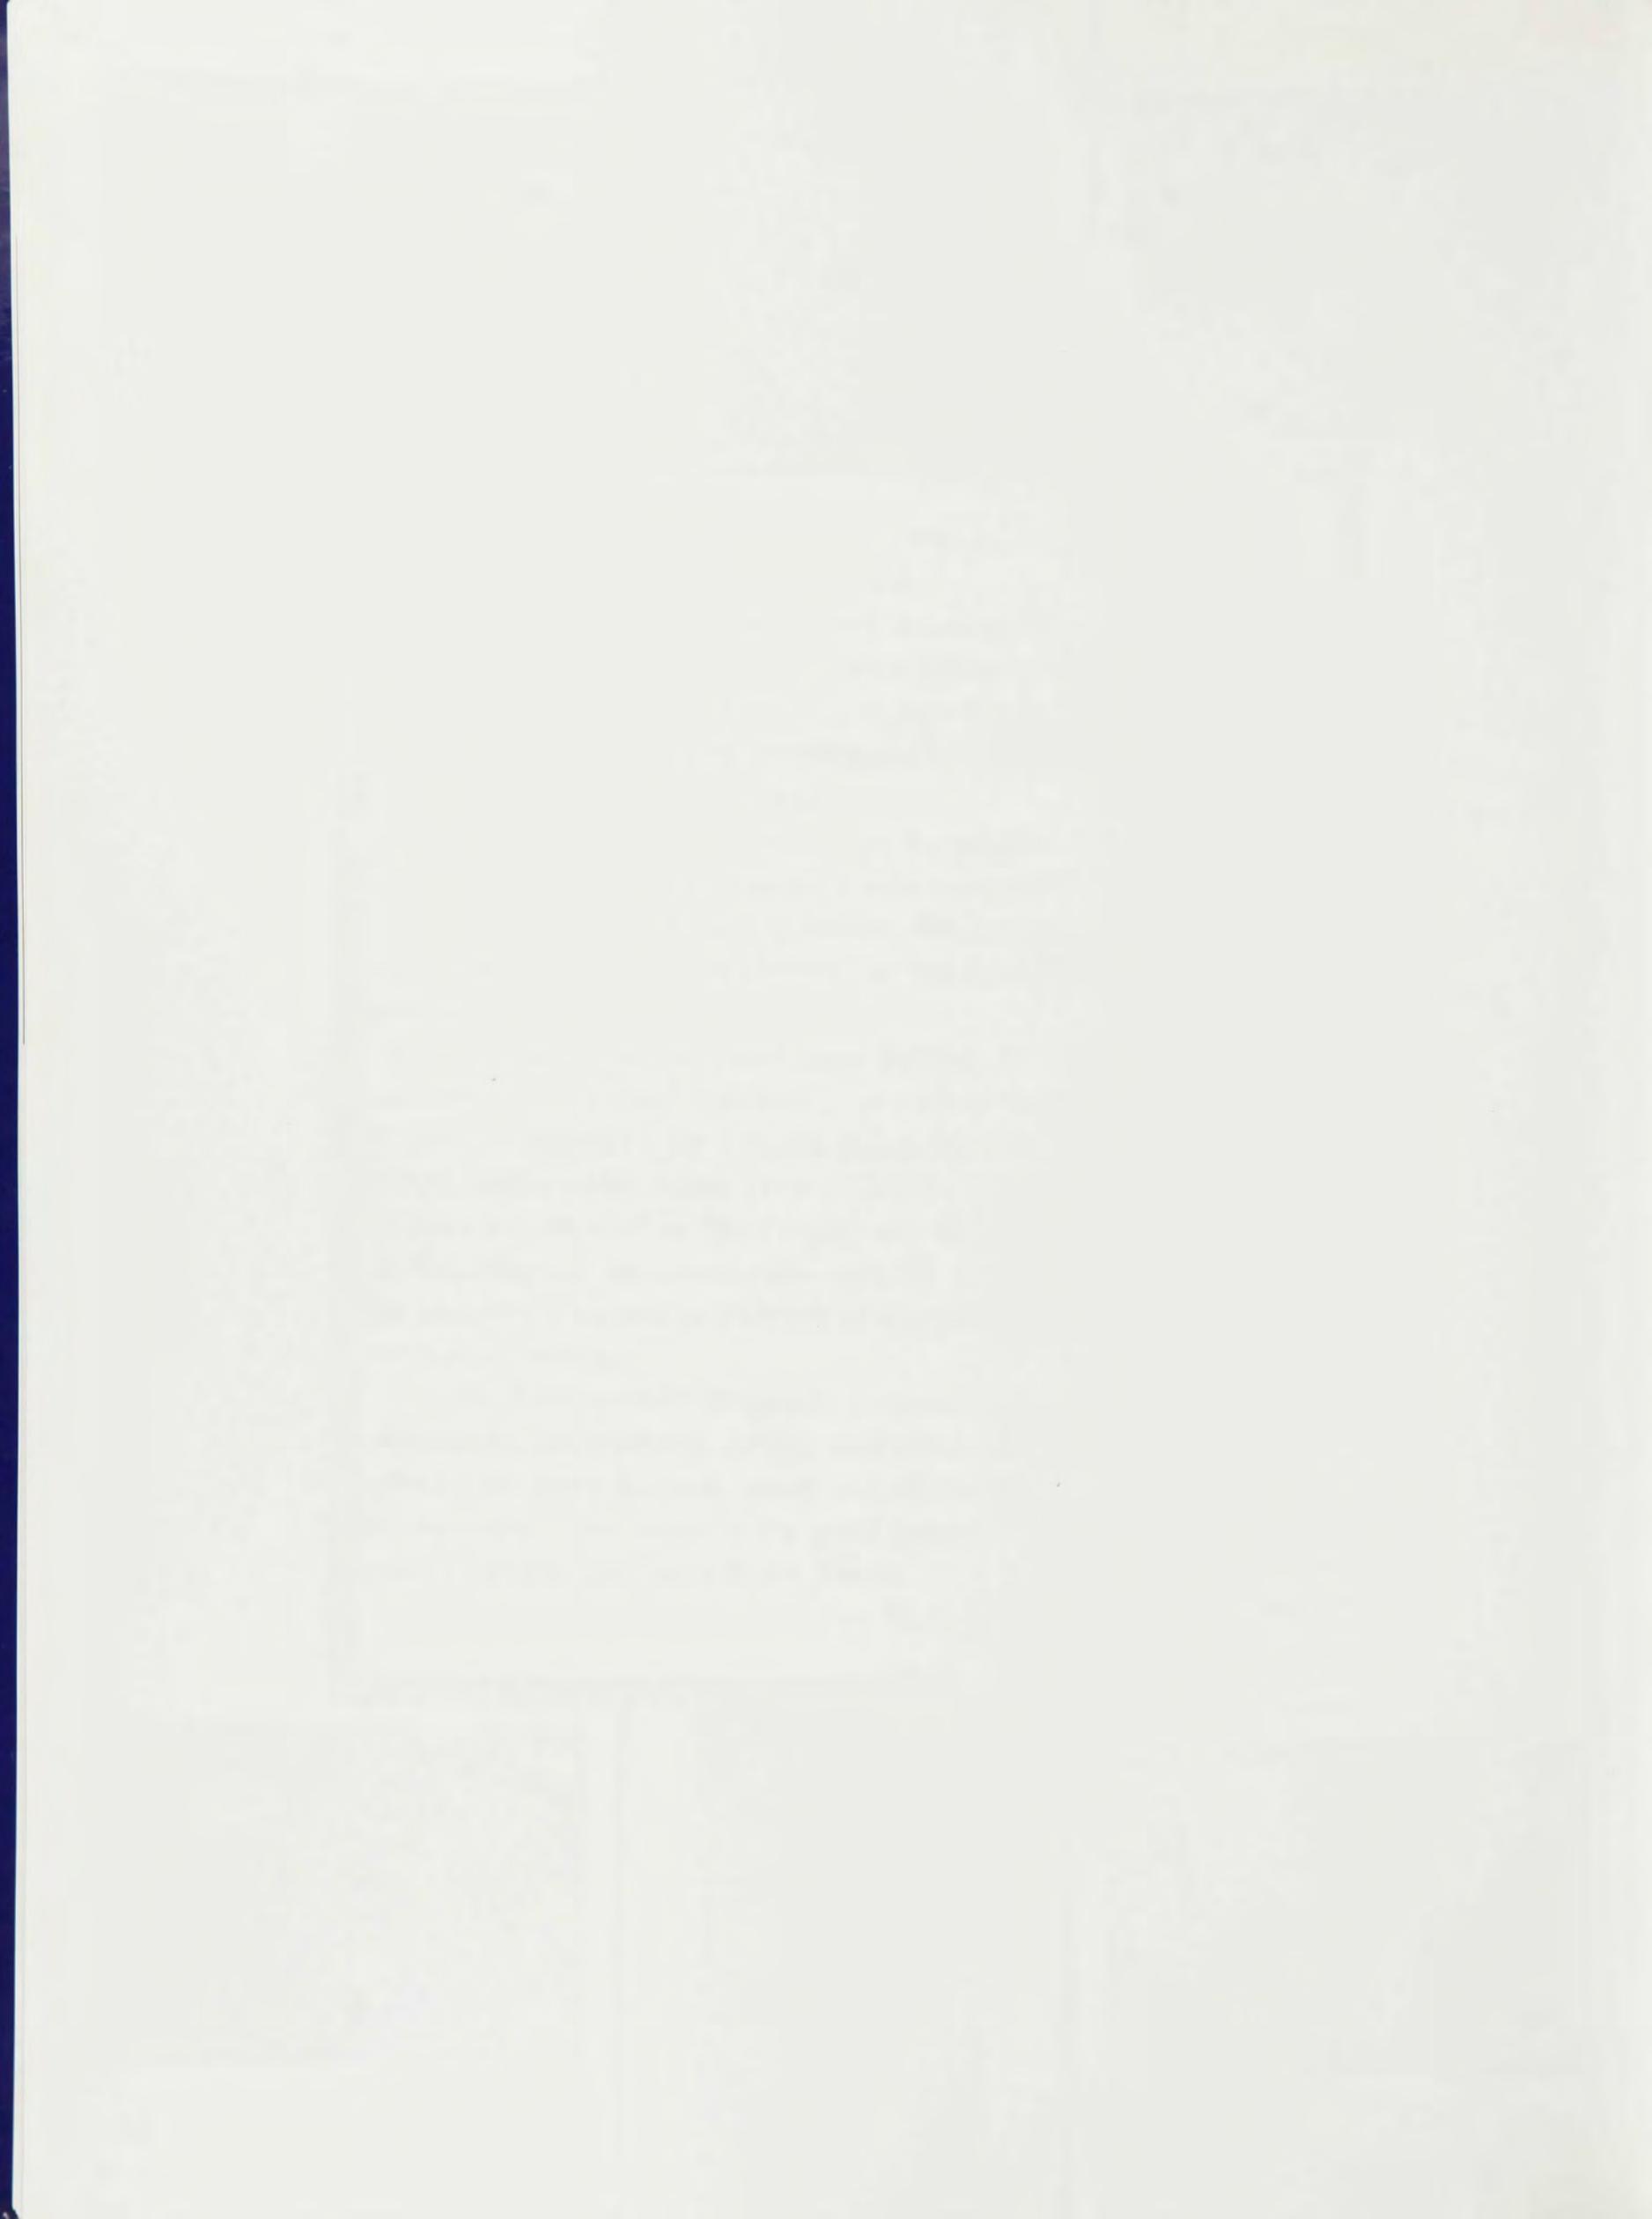

We can prove our productivity by what we have accomplished this year. We purchased a new computer and new software. We hired a new photographer. We allowed the senior class to choose the theme of their book for the first time in the Bonadieu's history.

For all of this, we owe much thanks. For their dedication, assistance, and positive attitudes we wish to thank the following people: in Student Life, George Solan and Ann Hurlburt; in Sports Information, Steve Mest; in Public Relations, Patty Thibodeau; the staff in Purchasing; our fabulous new photographer, Tom Martin; the senior class officers; Danielle Burt, and all of the students who sent in pictures or allowed us to interview them for feature stories.

We have worked diligently to create a book that fulfills the expectations of students, faculty and administration, and ourselves. We hope that you enjoy our efforts and that they help you to remember your years on the good journey. We wish all of you good luck and happiness in the future.
